

Contents

Preface		xii
Part One: The Revolutionary Heritage
Chapter 1	Western Imperialism and the Weakness of Chinese Social Classes	3
Chapter 2	The Defection of the Intellectuals	10
Chapter 3	The Abortiveness of Bourgeois and Proletarian Revolution	20
Chapter 4	The Maoist Phase of the Revolution and the Yanan Legacy	31
Part Two: The New Order, 1949–1955
Chapter 5	The Dilemmas of Victory	55
Chapter 6	The New State	64
Chapter 7	The Cities: The Rise and Fall of National Capitalism	84
Chapter 8	Land Reform: The Bourgeois Revolution in the Countryside	100
Chapter 9	The Social and Political Consequences of Industrialization	113
Chapter 10	Agricultural Collectivization, 1953–1957	140
Part Three: Revolutionary Revivalism, 1956–1960
Chapter 11	The Hundred Flowers: Socialism, Bureaucracy, and Freedom	167

Chapter 12	Permanent Revolution: The Ideological Origins of the Great Leap	204
Chapter 13	Economics of the Great Leap Forward	217
Chapter 14	The People's Communes and the "Transition to Communism" (1958–1960)	227
Part Four: The Thermidorean Reaction, 1960–1965
Chapter 15	The Bureaucratic Restoration	257
Chapter 16	The New Economic Policy, 1961–1965	274
Chapter 17	The Socialist Education Movement, 1962–1965	288
Part Five: The Cultural Revolution and Its Aftermath
Chapter 18	The Political History of the Cultural Revolution, 1966–1969	311
Chapter 19	Social Results of the Cultural Revolution	340
Chapter 20	China in the Aftermath of the Cultural Revolution, 1969–1976	360
Conclusion: Maoism and Socialism		384
Selected Bibliography		390
Index		399