

Contents

Introduction	1
0.1 Ancient Botany and Ways of Seeing Plants	2
0.1.1 Definitions of Nature	6
0.2 Humans and Plants: From Anthropocentrism to Ecocriticism	8
0.2.1 Plants and an Anthropocentric Worldview	8
0.2.2 Ancient Environmentalism?	13
0.2.3 Ecocriticism and Ancient Literature	15
0.3 Gods and Plants	18
0.3.1 Approaches to numen	18
0.3.2 Plants and Everyday Religion	21
0.3.3 Forms of Association: Nymphs and Trees	25
0.4 Plants as Symbol and Metaphor	30
0.4.1 Plants, People, and Analogy	31
0.4.2 Plants and Politics	35
0.5 Poetic Plants	38
0.5.1 Poetic Plants Before and Beside Vergil	38
0.5.2 Plants and Poetics in Vergil (a glimpse of a road not much taken)	41
 PART I. NUMEN
1. Numinous Habitats	53
1.1 Forests and Woodland Areas ( silua, saltus, nemus, lucus )	53
1.1.1 Backgrounds	53
1.1.2 Habitarunt di quoque siluas : Gods and Woods in the Eclogues	59
1.1.3 Present and Absent numen in the Woods of the Georgics	62
1.1.4 Religio dira loci : the Aeneid 's Woodland numen	70
1.1.4.1 Underworld Woods: numen and Confusion	70
1.1.4.2 Echoes of the Underworld: Aeaea, Tiber, Albunea, Amsanctus	79
1.1.4.3 Woodland numen and the City	85
1.2 Numen and Plants in Cultivated Land: Fields, Meadows, Plantations, and Gardens ( ager, aruus, campus, nouale/-is, pratium, rus, seges, arbusta, hortus )	92
1.2.1 Expected and Unexpected Agricultural Divinity in the Eclogues and Aeneid	95
1.2.2 Ceres, Bacchus, Corn, and Vines in the Georgics	98
1.2.3 Plants and Divine Metonymy	107

2. Gods' Special Species	115
2.1 Oak ( aesculus, quercus, robur, and ilex )	115
2.1.1 The Oak Transformed: Votive Tree and Trophy	128
2.2 Poplar ( populus )	131
2.3 Pine ( pinus, picea )	134
2.4 Olive and Wild Olive ( oliua, oleaster )	141
2.5 Laurel/Bay ( laurus )	146
2.6 Myrtle ( myrtus )	152
2.7 Cypress ( cupressus, cyparissus )	155
2.8 Ivy ( hedera )	157
2.9 The Borderline Divine: Magical and Medicinal Plants	159

PART II. HOMO

3. Tame Plants	173
3.1 Symbiosis	174
3.1.1 Harmonious Work in the Eclogues	177
3.1.2 The locus amoenus and Other Harmonious Habitats	181
3.1.3 Grain and Other Field Crops: Shared Endeavour and Shared Suffering	188
3.1.4 Useful Trees	196
3.1.4.1 Useful Trees and the Exotic	203
3.1.5 Productivity at a Price: the Vine	207
3.2 Conflict	210
3.2.1 Too Much of a Good Thing? Farming as Restraint of Nature	210
3.2.2 Farming as Violence	213
3.2.2.1 Vines and Violence	216
3.2.2.2 Grafting: Art or Abuse?	220
3.2.2.3 Cultivation and Violence: Metaphor in Reverse	229
4. Wild Plants	233
4.1 Defining the Wild	233
4.1.1 Flowers: Wild yet Tame, Tame yet Wild	240
4.1.1.1 Flowers and Bees	242
4.1.1.2 Flowers and People: Beauty, Sex, and Death	247
4.1.2 Wildness and Spontaneous Production in Trees	252
4.1.3 Degeneration and Degeneracy	260

Contents

ix

4.2 Weeds	263
4.2.1 Weeds and Further Questions of Definition	263
4.2.2 Characterizing Weeds	265
4.2.3 Intermediate Weeds	275
4.2.4 Crossing (and Making) Boundaries with Brambles	278
4.2.5 Grass: From Harmony to Danger	285
4.3 Fighting and Felling: a Coda	288
Conclusions	293
Works Cited	299
Index of Plants Discussed	319
Index of Passages Discussed	322
General Index	327