

Contents

Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xxi
Introduction	xxiii
1 Political and Artistic Divides in Baudelaire: An Aesthetic of Evil	1
2 The Diabolical Character of Modern Political Redemption	29
3 Benjamin's Politicized Reading of Baudelaire	59
4 The God's Eye View of the Historical Materialist	93
5 Paris, Melancholy, and Phantasmagoria: Economic Determinations or a Human Soul-Scape?	107
6 Flâneurs: Baudelaire's Urban Self-Makers, Benjamin's Accomplices of Commodity Capitalism, and Redeeming Rag-Pickers	133
7 Baudelaire's "Depraved" View of Women and Benjamin's Redemption of Commodified Fallen Women	145
Conclusion	171
Bibliography	177
Index	185
About the Authors	197