

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface . . . . .	IX
Introduction . . . . .	I
I. The Historical Narrative . . . . .	5
1. Plato's Youth and Early Manhood . . . . .	5
2. The First Journey to Sicily and the Motives for the Second. . . . .	15
3. The Counsel to Dion's Followers . . . . .	24
4. Plato's Relation to Dion and to Dionysius; the Portrayal of Plato. . . . .	39
5. The Motives for the Writing of the Letter . . . . .	56
II. The Philosophical Digression . . . . .	70
1. The Philosophical Test. . . . .	70
2. Plato's Views on Philosophical Writing . . . . .	76
3. The Doctrine of the Fifth . . . . .	85
4. The Import of the so-called Philosophical Digression	108
III. The Other Platonic Letters in their Relation to the Autobiography . . . . .	121
1. The Letters to Philosophers and Statesmen outside the Sicilian Circle . . . . .	122
2. Letters to Archytas and Dion. . . . .	127
3. Letters to Dionysius. . . . .	131
4. The Second Letter to Dion and his Followers . . . . .	145
5. The Background of the Collection of Letters . . . . .	156
6. Conclusion . . . . .	161
Conclusion. . . . .	166
Appendix . . . . .	170