

TABLE OF CONTENTS

List of Illustrations . . . . .	X
Preface . . . . .	XI
Special Abbreviations . . . . .	XIII
Introduction . . . . .	I
I. Plato's Mimesis Doctrine . . . . .	9
1. A Revision of Koller's Thesis . . . . .	10
2. Dramatic and Static Notions of Imitation . . . . .	11
3. The Meanings of Mîmos and its Derivatives before Plato . . . . .	14
A. Dramatic Echoes. . . . .	15
B. The Meanings of "Reembodiment" and "Emula- tion" . . . . .	17
C. Mimesis as the Imitation of Sound . . . . .	18
D. Words of the Mîmos -Group Applied to Static Representation . . . . .	19
E. Mimesis as Plagiarism . . . . .	21
4. Conclusions about the Meaning of Mimesis before Plato . . . . .	22
5. The Direction of Greek Aesthetic Thought Diametri- cally Opposed to Our Own . . . . .	22
6. Dramatic Mimesis and Mimesis as a Synonym for 'Eικασία in Plato . . . . .	23
7. Mimesis through Music and Dance . . . . .	29
8. The Mimesis Conception after Plato . . . . .	30
II. Painting as an Allegory of the Phenomenal World and as a Symbol of Fiction . . . . .	33
1. Why is Eyesight—and not one of the Other Senses— Symbolic for the Phenomenal World? . . . . .	33
2. Why is Painting so Often Illustrative of the Pheno- menal World? . . . . .	35
3. Plato's Puns on the Vocabulary of the Art of Painting	36
4. Plato's Metaphorical Allusions to Painting not Always Unkind . . . . .	41

5. Painting as a Metaphor for Poetic Fiction and for Rhetoric . . . . .	42
6. Which Type of Mimesis was Plato's Real Target? . . . . .	44
III. Other Views of Plato's Relation to the Fine Arts . . . . .	48
IV. The State of Greek Painting in Plato's Time . . . . .	59
1. Introduction . . . . .	59
2. Foreshortening . . . . .	63
3. Linear Perspective . . . . .	63
4. The Mixing of Pigments . . . . .	66
5. The Superposition of Colors. . . . .	70
6. Skiagraphia Equated with the Birth of Painting . . . . .	72
7. Modern Translations of Skiagraphia . . . . .	73
8. Skiagraphia in post-classical Greek Texts . . . . .	75
9. Pliny's Passage on lumen et umbrae . . . . .	77
10. Skiagraphia in Classical Greek Authors . . . . .	78
11. Skiagraphia a Familiar Technique to Plato and Aristotle . . . . .	79
12. The View from a Distance . . . . .	81
13. The Patches of Contrasting Colors in Skiagraphia . . . . .	82
14. Two Problematic Passages in Plato . . . . .	84
15. Conclusion . . . . .	87
V. Artists and Critical Issues Cited in the Dialogues . . . . .	88
1. Introduction . . . . .	88
2. Form Versus Color, or Parrhasius Versus Zeuxis . . . . .	91
3. Ethos as a Critical Concept in Drama and Painting . . . . .	95
4. Ethos as a Feature of Drama and Painting in Plato . . . . .	107
VI. Other Technical Terminology in the Dialogues . . . . .	110
1. Perspective . . . . .	110
2. Optical Proportions . . . . .	111
3. Χραινειν and 'Αποχραινειν . . . . .	115
VII. The Case for Plato's Growing Hostility towards Painting . . . . .	118
1. Gratuitous Criticisms of Painting . . . . .	118
A. Theaetetus 145a . . . . .	119
B. Laws 769 . . . . .	120
C. Politicus 277c . . . . .	121
2. Painting and Geometry . . . . .	122
3. Conclusion . . . . .	125

VIII. Plato and Democritus on Art . . . . .	126
1. The Antagonism of the two Philosophers . . . . .	126
2. The Chain of Pains and Pleasures . . . . .	129
3. Pleasure as a Criterion of the Arts . . . . .	131
4. The Divine Inspiration of the Artist . . . . .	134
5. Conclusion . . . . .	137
IX. The Sicyonian School of Painting . . . . .	139
1. The History of the School . . . . .	139
2. The Sicyonian Influence on Education . . . . .	144
3. Plato and the Sicyonian School . . . . .	147
4. Other Views on Plato's Reaction to Pamphilus' Educational Scheme . . . . .	149
5. Conclusion . . . . .	150
Index of Principal Greek and Latin Texts Cited . . . . .	151
Index of Names and Subjects . . . . .	153