

Contents

Foreword	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
PART I
General introduction	1
My work in the context of debates about religious education	3
1 Religious education and the arts of interpretation revisited	16
PART II
Empirical research	29
Introduction	31
2 Studying British Hindu children and representing them in school texts	37
3 The diversity of experience in the religious upbringing of children from Christian families in Britain	50
4 The ‘Young People’s Attitudes to Religious Diversity’ project in the context of Warwick Religions and Education Research Unit (WRERU) research	63
PART III
The interpretive approach to religious education	77
Introduction	79
5 Studying religious diversity in public education: An interpretive approach to religious and intercultural understanding	86

vi	Contents
6	The representation of religions	103
7	Implications of an interpretive approach	124
8	Contextual religious education and the interpretive approach	148
	PART IV
	Religious education and plurality	165
	Introduction	167
9	Religious education in the context of plurality	171
10	Religious education's contribution to intercultural education, citizenship education and values education	192
11	Towards a pluralistic religious education	211
	PART V
	Human rights and international policy developments	225
	Introduction	227
12	Dialogical liberalism: A human rights rationale for 'education about religions and beliefs'	237
13	Inclusive study of religions and world views in schools: Signposts from the Council of Europe	248
14	The politicisation and securitisation of religious education?: A rejoinder	264
	 Index	 286