

Table of Contents

Introduction: “Hedged-in cornfields and measured hills”	9
1 “No monument”: Romanticism, Literature and Space	17
1.1 Literary Space and the Spatial Turn	19
1.1.1 Spatial turn, topographical turn, topological turn.....	19
1.1.2 Literary Space	31
1.2 “Reserved for the royal possessor”: Literary Space and/as Social Space.....	38
1.2.1 Reading Social Space	40
1.2.2 Performing Literary Space	45
1.3 “The offspring of art, the nursling of nature”: Mary Shelley and the History of Space.....	47
1.3.1 Histories of Space	48
1.3.2 Reading Romantic Literary Space.....	54
2 The Last Man and “the order of the systematic world”	67
2.1 “On the giddy height”	69
2.1.1 Living Maps	71
2.1.2 Writing in Windsor	82
2.1.3 “Seeing a battle”	87
2.2 “The question of contagion”	94
2.2.1 Reading the Plague.....	95
2.2.2 Geographies of Disease	99
2.2.3 Lost Spaces	110
2.3 Cities of the Plague	116
2.3.1 Constantinople/Stamboul	117
2.3.2 Rome: Visiting “the scene which they beheld”	127
2.3.3 Fanatics in Paris, Ghosts in Versailles	134
2.3.4 London, “sufficiently changed”	140
3 “A race of devils would be propagated upon the earth”: Frankenstein , Imaginary Populations, and Imaginary Spaces	149
3.1 “A world already possessed”: Naturalising Poverty	154
3.1.1 Spaces of Perfectibility	154
3.1.2 Anti-Utopian Islands	157
3.2 “The production of men”: From Thought Experiment to Fiction.....	160
3.2.1 The Last Man : Imagining a Depopulated Earth	162
3.2.2 The 1831 Frankenstein and the Children of the Poor	167
3.3 “Remember Utopia!” Gothic Imaginary Spaces in the 1818 Frankenstein	174
3.3.1 Hidden Spaces.....	174
3.3.2 Spaces of Pursuit	179
3.4 “The encroachment of the polar ice”: Resisting the Naturalisation Effect.....	184
3.4.1 Imagining the Arctic	187

3.4.2	Mutability.....	198
4	Lodore : Making the Best of the Conventionalities.....	203
4.1	“A bird of beauty, brooding in its own fair nest”.....	210
4.1.1	Travelling.....	214
4.1.2	Cottage, Garden, Study.....	219
4.1.3	Drawing, Furnishing, Acting.....	229
4.2	“Indeed, in England or America, she lived in a desert”.....	235
4.2.1	“The ‘falls’ of Lodore”.....	237
4.2.2	On the Impossibility of Travelling from Italy to England.....	245
4.2.3	The City as Theatre.....	252
	Conclusion: “Yet is it true that we do not believe in ghosts?”.....	261
	Bibliography.....	267