

CONTENTS

CONTENTS	v
INTRODUCTION	xi
THE BOOK OF TORTS	1
TREATISE ONE: DAMAGE BY CHATTELS	3
Chapter 1. Responsibility for damage by animals. Definition of forewarned and innocuous states. Extent of liability. Exemptions. Injury received during trespass. Primary types of damage by an ox (horn, tooth, and foot) and damages that are derivatives of these types	4
Chapter 2. Types of damage that are forewarned ab initio . Damage by springing pebbles. Its liability. Distinction between compensation and fine. Damage by poultry and dogs	7
Chapter 3. Damage by tooth, and its subspecies. Payment for benefit and for auxiliary damage. Damage on private premises by tooth and foot to, or by, trespasser and invitee	12
Chapter 4. Tooth and foot, continued. Exemptions of owner's liability. Status of a bailee. Joint and partial responsibility. Valuation of damage to growing crops	16
Chapter 5. Destructive small cattle and their slaughter after owner has been warned. Prohibition of rearing small cattle in cultivated areas of Palestine. Ten universal rights over privately owned land attributed to Joshua. Another ascribed to Solomon. Small cattle bought for food; and the keeping of pigs and dogs	19
Chapter 6. How horn becomes forewarned. Exceptions. Effect of sale. Reversion to innocuous state. Selective forewarning	21
Chapter 7. Horn, continued. Innocuous animals liable for damage. Injury to human beings. Damage on private premises by horn to, or by, trespasser and invitee. How compensation is calculated. Changes in value of injured, and injuring, animals between date of damage and date of trial	24
Chapter 8. Damage by oxen belonging to the Temple; by animals having no owner; belonging to an idolator. Sale before and after trial. How compensation is collected. Valid proof of damage	28
Chapter 9. Damage by an innocuous ox. Damage by, or to, a cow in calf. Disputed claims. Successive goings. Damage by two oxen to each other	32
Chapter 10. Manslaughter by an animal, and cases in which the owner is to pay ransom. How the animal becomes forewarned. Payment of ransom by partners. Exemptions. Unintentional manslaughter by animal. Case of trespasser. Type of compensation payable for slave	36

Chapter 11. How ransom is calculated. To whom it is payable. Goring of a pregnant slave. Compensation for damage after manslaughter. Alienation of ox after trial; and before trial. An ox condemned to be stoned	39
Chapter 12. Damage by pit. Its location. Exemption of liability. Responsibility of partners; and of a bailee. Minimum depth of pit for liability if animal dies. Damage by mounds. Damage caused jointly by ox and pit; or by two oxen	42
Chapter 13. Pit, continued. Exemption for damage to articles. Obstacles analogous to pit. Permissible and prohibited uses of a public highway. Cellars, ledges, and projections	48
Chapter 14. Damage by fire. Exemption of liability for objects hidden in a field. Fire caused by a shopkeeper's flares; and cases analogous to fire	53
TREATISE TWO: THEFT	59
Chapter 1. Prohibition of theft by the Law. Definition. Penalty of two-fold payment. The thief. Theft by married women, slaves, and minors. The stolen property; effect of intrinsic change, and of price fluctuation. Four-fold or five-fold penalty for selling or slaughtering a stolen ox or sheep	60
Chapter 2. Cases where two-fold penalty is not payable. Precise definition of slaughter of a stolen animal; of sale; of moment of theft	64
Chapter 3. The principle of only one penalty for each crime. Its incidence in special cases of theft and of slaughter or sale. Effect of confession by a thief. Restitution from a thief's estate; by sale of the thief	67
Chapter 4. Case of bailee who falsely pleads theft. When a thief who replaces stolen property must inform the owner	71
Chapter 5. Prohibition of purchasing stolen property. Regulation for the benefit of market overt; detailed application. Plea and counterplea of theft and purchase	75
Chapter 6. The purchase of comestibles and other articles from employees; from women; from slaves and minors. Case of craftsmen and what remnants of material may be retained by them	78
Chapter 7. Prohibition of using defective weights. No two-fold penalty prescribed. Prohibition of keeping defective weights. What fractional measures may be employed. Prohibition of deceiving an idolator; of shifting a land boundary mark	79

Chapter 8. The duty to weigh and measure carefully; to use weights of noncorrosive material. Balances and scales for various trades. Prevalence of local custom in weighing. Regular cleansing of measures. Inspectors of weights and prices and their powers	82
Chapter 9. Theft and sale of human beings. Cases where death penalty is not enforced. Slaying of a thief breaking into a dwelling	85
TREATISE THREE: ROBBERY AND LOST PROPERTY	89
Chapter 1. Concerning the crime of robbery; of withholding any object of value belonging to another. On the robber's duty to restore the property or its value; a pēruṭah considered the minimum of value to be restored. Covetousness, and desire for another's property. A rabbinic regulation for the encouragement of penitent robbers	90
Chapter 2. Acquisition of stolen property by specificatio ; of natural products, e.g., wool and offspring of animals, after owner's dereliction. Acquisition by permanent alteration. Some examples	93
Chapter 3. Effect of price fluctuation on valuation of stolen property. Effect of deterioration. Unauthorized use of another's property, slave, bailment, or house. Unauthorized borrowing or seizing of a pledge	97
Chapter 4. A claim on oath from a suspected robber. Restitution of stolen property when identity of person robbed is uncertain. The plea that property seized belongs to the taker	101
Chapter 5. Purchase and beneficial use of stolen property. Geonic legislation on claims against a deceased robber's personal estate. Tax collection and extortion by public officials or by a monarch	106
Chapter 6. Law relating to property recovered from a flooded river, or from bandits; to edible weeds; to exchange of apparel by mistake. Cases regarded by the Rabbis as robbery. Laws relating to snaring and rearing pigeons; to gambling; to pilfering from traps and snares; to bees. Claims not enforceable in a court of law	110
Chapter 7. The false denial under oath of money due. The added fifth. Sacrifice of a guilt offering	114
Chapter 8. Death of the person robbed. Case where the robber is his heir. Case where the robbed person is an heirless proselyte. Restoration of robbery of land, slaves, and documents	117
Chapter 9. Robbery of land. Payment for crops consumed. Sale of stolen land. Case where the robber acquires the land after selling it	121
Chapter 10. Land seized by an idolator from one Israelite and sold to another. Improvements, unauthorized and authorized, to agricultural land; to residential property; to land not in use. Confirmation of claims under oath. Effect of divorce on a wife's property	124

Chapter 11. Obligation to restore lost property. Cases where dereliction is presumed. The finder's dignity and the duty to restore. Effective restoration described. The duty of preventing loss to land	127
Chapter 12. Priority of one's own lost property over another's; similar priorities. Caravan attacked by bandits. Mutual insurance. Property jettisoned from stormbound ship	132
Chapter 13. Advertisement of property found. Identification. Several claimants. Unclaimed lost property. Care and ultimate sale of livestock. Use of the proceeds	135
Chapter 14. Lost property where the owner has abandoned hope of recovery. Property lacking identification marks. Lost property that is recognized by a scholar	140
Chapter 15. Distinction between property lost and property deposited. The case of livestock; of finds made in a rubbish dump; of unidentifiable produce and fruit	143
Chapter 16. Finds of money; in a shop; in a money-changer's shop; among produce; buried in a wall	148
Chapter 17. How a find is acquired. The case of found animals. Acquisition through the medium of a courtyard or a person's "four cubits." Finds by the mentally incompetent and by children	150
Chapter 18. Found documents. Bonds of indebtedness. Bills of divorcement and manumission. Deeds of gift. Marriage settlement. Documents issued by a court of law	153
TREATISE FOUR: WOUNDING AND DAMAGING	159
Chapter 1. The five effects of wounding: injury, pain, medical treatment, loss of employment, and humiliation. Calculation of injury. The lex talionis and the scriptural and traditional basis of compensation. How liability varies with degree of intent. Appraisal of blow and injury	160
Chapter 2. Liability and actual number of effects caused by wounding. Examples. Shock. Onus of proof where blindness or deafness is alleged. How to assess pain, loss of employment, medical treatment	164
Chapter 3. How to assess humiliation. Verbal insults to scholars. Blows entailing fixed amounts of compensation	169
Chapter 4. Assault causing miscarriage. Liability for wounding on the Sabbath and Day of Atonement. Wounding of slaves, minors, married women, husband and wife, one's own children	171
Chapter 5. The prohibition of assault, including self-wounding. Credibility of claimant under oath. Compensation accompanied by an apology. Forgiveness as a virtue. Authorization by the plaintiff as defense of the defendant	176

Chapter 6. Damage to property; on defendant's premises. Damages regarded as act of God. Collisions. Damage caused by more than one defendant	179
Chapter 7. Nondetectable damage, e.g., food rendered religiously unfit to eat; further examples. Indirect damage. Appraisal of the damage. How damage is calculated. When plaintiff is believed on oath	183
Chapter 8. The law of the informer, and damage caused during rescue from a pursuer	188
TREATISE FIVE: MURDER AND THE PRESERVATION OF LIFE	193
Chapter 1. Murder as a capital crime. The avenger of blood. Trial of murderer. The preventive killing of a "pursuer"	195
Chapter 2. Procurance of murder. Its penalty. Age of person murdered. Killing of a slave	198
Chapter 3. Appraisal of the murder weapon and of the blow. Examples to illustrate the difference between direct and indirect responsibility for a death	202
Chapter 4. Death caused by misdirected blow. Cases in which death of victim is expected to ensue. Homicide by several persons jointly. Ways of effecting the death of a flagrant murderer. Procuring the death of certain types of heretical Israelites	205
Chapter 5. Exile for inadvertent slayer; some exceptions. Procedure in cases of homicide. The Temple altar as refuge for inadvertent slayer	209
Chapter 6. Definition of three kinds of inadvertent homicide. Homicide by a personal enemy. Cases where homicide is a pure accident	212
Chapter 7. Exile of a disciple, a teacher, a slave, a wife. Case where slayer dies before exile. Inadvertent homicide by a resident of a city of refuge. Termination of exile by death of High Priest. Law of those returned from exile	216
Chapter 8. The appointment of special Cities of Refuge. Levitical cities as places of refuge. The limits of a City of Refuge	218
Chapter 9. Murder by persons unknown and the rite of beheading a heifer incumbent upon the city nearest to where the slain was found. How to determine the nearest city. Cases in which the rite of beheading a heifer does not apply	221
Chapter 10. Lands in which the rite is applicable. The heifer and what renders it ineligible. The effect of discovery of the murderer. The valley	224
Chapter 11. The obligation to make a parapet to a roof. Actions prohibited by the Rabbis because of danger to life. Liquids left exposed	226

Chapter 12. The prohibition to eat poisoned meat or pecked fruit; to suck coins; to contaminate food with human perspiration; to be alone with a heathen; to buy medicaments from him; to sell heathen weapons other than purely defensive ones; to give an Israelite bad advice	230
Chapter 13. The duty to help load or unload the burden of a pack animal. The right to pass or overtake on a narrow road or river	233
NOTES	237
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS	282
GLOSSARY OF TECHNICAL TERMS	284
INDEX	287