

Total Mobilization

World War II and American Literature

ROY SCRANTON

The University of Chicago Press
Chicago and London

Contents

List of Figures ix

Introduction: A True War Story 1

1 The Bomber

The Bomber Lyric	15
The Bomber as Scapegoat: Randall Jarrell's "Eighth Air Force"	32
Atrocity Aesthetics: James Dickey's "The Firebombing"	49
Agency and Death	57

2 Repetitions of a Hero

The Hero as Riddle: The Negro Hero and the Nation within a Nation	63
The Hero as Social Media: The Caine Mutiny	76
Participating in the Heroic: Wallace Stevens and the Poetry of War	90
The Reality of the Modern State: The Thin Red Line	102

3 War as Comedy

Zany Dialectics: "Bugs Bunny Nips the Nips"	119
The Education of a War Poet: Kenneth Koch at War	129
Barbaric Poetry: From Okinawa to the Cold War	141
Encoding War: "Sun Out" and "The Islands"	150

4 Total War and Historical Time

War as Origin Myth: Joan Didion's Run River	159
War as a Promise to the Future: "Letter from Paradise, 21° 19' N., 157° 52' W."	168
The Hanged Man and the Military-Industrial Complex: The Young Lions and Gravity's Rainbow	175
One World, One War: The Great War and Modern Memory	183
War as Fantasy: Star Wars	188

5 The Trauma Hero

Combat Gnosticism and the Old Lie: From Clausewitz to The Yellow Birds	195
Traumatic Revelation	207
"The Good War" and Postmodern Memory	222

Conclusion: Nothing Is Over 227

Acknowledgments 245

Works Cited 249

Index 265