

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
Section I. From Essentialism to Reconstructionism to Existentialism: The Early Impact of Theodore Brameld's Work on My Philosophy of Education	11
Chapter 1. An Introduction to the Sociopolitical Vision of Theodore Brameld (1904–1987)	13
Chapter 2. To Be an Effective Educator, One Must First Be a Philosopher of Education	23
Chapter 3. Looking at Specific Strategies in Brameld's Teaching Philosophy	33
Chapter 4. My Philosophical Evolution to Postmodern Existentialism	45
Chapter 5. What Does the Quest for Meaning Have to Do With Interdisciplinary Study and Practice?	61
Section II: Creating an Interdisciplinary Education for College Students	81
Chapter 6. Why the Need for an Interdisciplinary Studies Graduate Program? My Self-Study Report for the University of Vermont, 2018	83

Chapter 7.	Offering My First Interdisciplinary Graduate Seminar Four Decades Ago	103
Chapter 8.	Offering My First Undergraduate Interdisciplinary Seminar	121
Chapter 9.	Crossover Pedagogy: One Type of Interdisciplinary Coteaching	137
Section III.	A Series of Personal Reflections on Teaching and Learning	155
Chapter 10.	What I Believe About Teaching and Learning: A Series of Hard-Won Teaching–Learning Aphorisms	157
Chapter 11.	A Letter to Robert: “What I Took Away From the Interdisciplinary Program”	167
Chapter 12.	Scholarly Personal Narrative Writing (SPN): An Anonymous E-Mail From a Junior Faculty Member	175
Chapter 13.	How to Teach Scholarly Personal Narrative Writing (SPN): A Syllabus	183
Chapter 14.	Deep-Meaning Learning: Ethics of Helping Relationships	201
Chapter 15.	Deep-Meaning Learning: Religion, Spirituality, and Education	217
Chapter 16.	Conclusion: An Anniversary Letter to My Readers	235