

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	11
1. Introduction	13
2. How to use this volume	15
2.1. Principles of transcription, alphabetization, and pronunciation	15
2.1.1. Azerbaijani	15
2.1.1.1. Transcription	15
2.1.1.2. On the alphabetical arrangement of the Azerbaijani letters	17
2.1.1.3. A rough guide to Azerbaijani pronunciation	17
2.1.2. Chaghatay	19
2.1.3. Chinese	19
2.1.4. Classical Arabic, Ottoman, Old Western Oghuz and Persian	19
2.1.5. Kazakh	19
2.1.6. Russian	20
2.2. List of abbreviations	20
2.3. List of symbols	20
3. Problem areas	21
3.1. The need for new text editions	21
3.2. The scarceness of information about Nəsimi	23
3.3. The nature of Nəsimi's poetry	24
4. Looking at the historical background	27
4.1. Azerbaijan and the South Caucasus – a region of transit	27

4.2. Azerbaijan and its surroundings in the Mongol era	28
4.3. Post-Genghizid Azerbaijan and its environment	31
4.3.1. The Jalairids	31
4.3.2. The Shirvanshahs	33
4.3.3. Tamerlane and the Timurids	35
4.3.4. The Golden Horde and Toxtamiş	38
4.3.5. The Qaraqoyunlu	39
4.3.6. The Aqqoyunlu	43
4.3.7. The Mamlukes	44
4.3.8. The D ū'l-ḳadr dynasty	47
4.3.9. The Muḳaffarids	56
4.3.10. A place of special meaning: Əlincə	56
4.4. Outlook: The relevance of the political landscape for the understanding of Nəsimi	58
4.5. The H urūfiya of Fazlollāh Astarābādī	60
4.5.1. A short note about terminology	62
4.5.2. On the history and theory of H urūfī “lettrism”	64
4.5.2.1. On the pre-Islamic history of lettrism	66
4.5.2.2. Letters are equal to numbers: lettrism between antiquity and Islam	70
4.5.2.3. Islamic lettrism before and outside the H urūfiya	71
4.5.2.3.1. Ğafr	71
4.5.2.3.2. Other forms of Islamic lettrism	84
4.5.2.4. The Kabbalah question	89
4.5.2.5. Some basic aspects of H urūfiya lettrism	90
4.5.2.5.1. Fazlollāh’s main works	91
4.5.2.5.2. Letters and numbers	92
4.5.2.5.3. Lines, writing, and the human face	94
4.5.2.5.4. The apotheosis of the Perfect Man	96
4.5.2.5.5. Love	98
4.5.2.5.6. Apocalyptic drama	98
4.5.2.6. Fazlollāh’s sources of inspiration	99
4.5.2.6.1. Dreams	99

4.5.2.6.2. Eroticizm	100
4.5.2.6.3. Christianity	102
4.5.3. Parenthesis: Messianic movements in the post-Genghizid space	104
4.5.4. Fazlollāh of Astarābād	105
4.5.4.1. Names and descent	106
4.5.4.2. Birth and early life	107
4.5.4.3. Becoming a Sufi	109
4.5.4.4. Fazlollāh's dreams and prophethood	111
4.5.4.5. Missionizing	116
4.5.4.6. Imprisonment and death	123
4.5.4.7. Progeny	126
4.5.5. The political movement after Fazlollāh's death	128
4.5.5.1. The character of the political movement after Fazlollāh's death	128
4.5.5.2. 'Alīyo'l-A'lā and the mission in Anatolia	131
4.5.5.3. Other pupils of Fazlollāh	133
4.5.5.4. Other early Ḥurūfī activities	134
4.5.5.5. Towards the end of the political movement	137
4.5.6. The Ḥurūfīya and its afterlife after the political failure of the movement	137
4.5.7. Is the Ḥurūfīya Islamic or not?	143

5. Nəsimi	149
5.1. Names	149
5.2. Life	153
5.2.1. Presumed year of birth	153
5.2.2. Theories about his place of birth	154
5.2.2.1. *Nəsim?	154
5.2.2.2. Shirvan or Şamaxı?	157
5.2.2.3. Places in Iran?	157
5.2.2.4. Other suggestions	158
5.2.3. What we know about Nəsimi's life	159

5.2.4. Death	163
5.2.4.1. According to Sibṭ b. al-‘Aḡamī and Ibn Ḥaḡar	163
5.2.4.2. Other versions of Nāsīmī’s death	183
5.3. Alleged grave	185
5.4. Works	188
5.5. Afterlife	189
6. Some characteristic topics of Nāsīmī’s Turkic divan	191
6.1. The apotheosis of man	192
6.2. Epistemological focus on the self	197
6.3. World-weariness	200
6.4. Language mysticism	203
6.5. The fantasy of immortality	205
7. Conclusion	207
8. Timetable	211
9. List of references	225
9.1. Manuscripts	225
9.2. Other references	225
Index	245