

CONTENTS

Introduction to Volume Two	v
List of figures	XXIII
List of tables	XXV

Part II – National experiences

Chapter V. Changes in British economic policy, 1960–1973, F. Blackaby

A. Introduction	1
B. General chronological background	4
1. 1960–1964: The basic pattern	6
2. 1964–1969: Prologue and epilogue to devaluation	8
3. 1969–1973: Delay in re-expansion	12
4. Summary	15
C. The rise and fall of planning	16
1. Origins of the idea	16
2. The national Economic Development Council: 1961–1964	17
3. The Labour Government: The National Plan	18
4. Assessment	20
D. Incomes policy and inflation	21
1. Origins of the idea	21
2. Incomes policy: The early moves	24
3. Incomes policy: The Labour period	25
4. Specific comments on the Labour period	27
5. The Conservative period	28
6. Appraisal	30
E. From fixed to floating exchange-rates	31
1. Origins of the idea	31
2. The decision to devalue	34
3. The move to a floating rate	35
4. Assessment	36
Bibliography	37

Updating. Account of mid-1973 to November 1974	40
1. Introduction	40
2. Chronological account	40
3. Planning and incomes policy	42
4. The exchange-rate	43
 Comments of an eastern devil's advocate on F. Blackaby, Z. Kamecki
Weaknesses in Britain's economic policy during the Sixties	44
1. Introduction	44
2. The failure to settle the balance of payments problem	45
3. The failure to introduce planning	49
4. So-called incomes policy	53
5. The move to a floating exchange-rate	58
Bibliography	59
 Chapter VI. The Hungarian reform, towards a planned, guided market economy, L. Csapó
Introduction	60
A. The basic facts of the Hungarian economy	61
1. The structure	61
2. The institutional framework	61
B. Development strategy, policies, and the directive model after 1949	63
1. The development strategy, policies and the directive model	63
2. The growth of the economy	64
3. The pattern of growth, the directive model and some of their consequences	64
4. Theoretical debates about the policy and the directive model	67
C. The reform: Its preparation and introduction	69
1. The theoretical model of the guided market economy	69
2. The preparation of the reform	72
D. Principal characteristics and functioning of the new model	75
1. The new planning system and methods	75
2. Organization of the market	81
3. Foreign trade	86
4. The price system	92
5. The regulation of investments	102
6. The credit system	110
7. Distribution of income within enterprises	117
8. Income differentials	128
E. The evaluation of the guided market model	129
1. Overall achievements	129
2. Income increases	131

3. Private savings	133
4. Efficiency	133
5. General conclusions	135
Bibliography	137
Appendix 1. Further data on the use of public finance instruments in Hungary: 1969	139
Updating. Developments in 1973 – Some problems in the operation of the guided market model in the Seventies	140
1. The main quantitative indicators	140
2.	140
Bibliography	142
 Comments of a western devil's advocate on L. Csapó, Z. Frank-Ossipoff
A. The genesis of the reform	143
1. The basic impulses	143
2. Highly centralized planning	144
3. The discussion about the persistence of the theory of value, and of commodity (and consequently of the market) within the framework of a socialist economy – The nature of the Hungarian reform	145
4. Some aspects of the reforms adopted in socialist-type countries other than Hungary	148
5. Some Hungarian achievements prior to the reform of 1968	150
B. Characteristics of the reform	152
C. Some of the consequences of the reform	154
1. Insufficient decentralization of investments	155
2. Price inflation	155
3. The insertion of agriculture in the new model	157
4. The limited role of the non-agricultural private sector	157
5. Shortage of manpower	158
6. The shortcomings of the system of workers' remuneration	158
D. Our own conclusions	160
Bibliography	161
 Chapter VII. Recent changes in the economic policy of socialist Poland, P. Bożyk and S. Góra
Introduction	163
A. Aims and objectives during the Sixties	163
1. Aims	163

2. Objectives, targets and achievements	164
3. International industrial cooperation	180
B. Changes during the Sixties in the system of economic planning and administration	183
1. General characteristics	183
2. Time-horizons in planning	185
3. Changes in the system of economic organization	187
4. Changes in planning methods	190
C. The increased role of economic instruments during the Sixties	196
1. Prices	196
2. Credit	199
3. Wages and material incentives	203
4. Instruments acting on households' savings	205
D. The new economic policy after 1970	206
1. Increase in the level of consumption	206
2. Further modernization of the economy	208
3. Increase in international cooperation	211
4. Achievements up to 1972	213
E. The economic management mechanism after 1971	214
1. Generalities	214
2. The system of economic organization	215
3. The planning mechanism	216
4. The management mechanism	217
5. The foreign trade mechanism	219
Bibliography	221
Appendix 1. Basic facts of the Polish economy	223
Appendix 2. Further analysis of the Polish foreign trade	224
1. Geographical structure	224
2. Poland's place in world trade	226
Updating. Recent changes in the economic policy of socialist Poland	226
1. Achievements in 1973-1974, up to September 1974	226
2. The economic management mechanism in 1973-1974, up to September 1974	227

*Comments by a western devil's advocate on P. Bożyk and S. Góra,
J. M. van Brabant*

1. Introduction	228
2. The distribution of national income	229
3. Agriculture	230
4. Foreign trade and specialization	233
5. The reforms of the Sixties	234

6. The reforms of the Seventies and the future of Polish economic policy	237
Bibliography	240

Part III – International experiences

Chapter VIII. Origins, aims and objectives of the EEC and the CMEA, E. S. Kirschen

A. Plan of the chapter	243
B. The origins of the main post-war international organizations	243
1. World responsibilities, parliament and police force	246
2. A western trade and payments system	246
3. The tensions between socialist and capitalist countries	247
4. The integration movement	248
C. Some comparisons between the EEC and the CMEA	249
D. The aims of integration	250
E. The transfer of economic policy objectives to integrated levels	251
1. During the Sixties	251
2. Further transfers contemplated for the Seventies – General analysis	252
3. Further transfers contemplated for the Seventies – Detailed analysis	254
Bibliography	256

Chapter IX. The economic policy of the EEC, L. Morissens

Introduction	257
A. Aims and objectives of the EEC	257
1. Aims	257
2. Economic policy objectives	260
B. The organization of the EEC	264
1. Institutions	264
2. Influence of the EEC on the use of instruments	268
3. The EEC budget	270
C. Creation of the common market for industry	270
D. Establishment of the common market for agriculture	275
1. Why there had to be a special agricultural policy	275
2. Achievements	277
3. Shortcomings and remedies	281
E. The common market for factors of production	283

1. The free movement of labour	283
2. Freedom to establish business and provide services	284
3. The free movement of capital	286
F. Short-term objectives and expansion of production	287
1. Short-term policy	287
2. Medium-term policy	289
3. Regional policy	292
4. Other policies	294
5. Shortcomings and remedies	296
G. The external policy of the EEC	298
1. The general system for the protection of home production of manufactured goods	299
2. The policy towards less developed countries	301
H. Conclusions	305
1. Achievements of the objectives	305
2. How economic policies are organized in the EEC	307
Bibliography	310
Updating. Main developments in the economic policy of the EEC up to June 1974	311
1. Accession of the United Kingdom, Ireland and Denmark	311
2. Agricultural policy	312
3. Short-term policy and the Economic and Monetary Union	312
4. Regional policy	313
5. Social policy	313
6. Security of supply (energy policy)	313
7. Industrial, technological and scientific policies	314
8. Quantitative improvement of the conditions of life (new objective for the EEC)	314
9. External policy	314
 Comments of an eastern devil's advocate on L. Morissens, Z. Kamecki
1. Introduction	315
2. The weakness of the barriers to capital concentration	316
3. The vagueness of the EEC social policy	320
4. The creation of a vacuum in economic policy	321
5. The question of transforming the EEC into an economic and monetary union	323
6. EEC and trade with third countries	324
7. EEC and East-West trade	328
8. The EEC policy towards less developed countries	334
Bibliography	337
 Comments of a western devil's advocate on L. Morissens, F. Blackaby
1. Introduction	338

2. The achievement of objectives	338
3. The regional problem	342
4. The political/economic imbalance	343
5. Economic growth criticized: The danger of remoteness	345
Bibliography	348
Chapter X. Economic cooperation between the members of the council of mutual economic assistance (CMEA), Z. Kamecki
A. Purpose and plan of this chapter	349
B. The background of the CMEA	350
C. The aims and objectives of the CMEA	352
1. Sources	352
2. The aims	352
3. The objectives	353
4. The main stages in CMEA activities	353
D. The organizational structure of the CMEA	358
1. Organs of the CMEA	358
2. Affiliate organizations	361
3. Some comments on the decision-making process in the CMEA	365
E. Mechanisms of economic cooperation between the CMEA States	366
1. Plan coordination sensu largo	367
2. Market economy instruments	372
3. Scientific and technical cooperation	378
F. General evaluation of the achievements of economic cooperation between the CMEA countries	379
1. Accelerated economic growth	379
2. Increasing trade between CMEA countries	380
3. Development of joint ventures	384
4. Development of scientific-technical cooperation among the CMEA States	386
5. Improvements in the mechanism of cooperation between CMEA countries	387
6. An insufficiently solved problem: the unsatisfactory development of the division of labour among CMEA countries	388
G. Economic integration of CMEA countries	390
1. The necessity of integration	390
2. "The complex programme for further deepening and advancing cooperation and development of socialist economic integration in CMEA member States"	391
3. Aims and objectives of the Complex Programme	391
4. Cooperation in particular fields of production, science and technology	392
5. Perfecting the tools of economic cooperation between CMEA countries	393
6. First steps in the implementation of the programme	395
7. A general appraisal of the programme	397
Bibliography	398

Appendix 1. Aims and objectives of the CMEA in the wording of its statute	399
Appendix 2. Basic principles of the international socialist division of labour	400
Appendix 3. Tasks of the CMEA committee for cooperation in planning	404
Appendix 4. Answers by the author of the chapter at a colloquium held in Brussels in January 1972	406
1. Why, when forming the CMEA, didn't the socialist countries immediately proceed with a programme of integrating their national economies?	406
2. "Basic Principles of the International Socialist Division of Labour" adopted in 1962	407
3. Coordination of investment	408
4. Compensation for transfers of scientific and technical information	409
5. International Bank of Economic Cooperation operations in convertible currencies and in gold	410
6. Responsibility (and sanctions for failure) to perform an obligation	410
7. Differences in the size of economic potential of the CMEA countries	411
Updating. Recent developments within the CMEA up to December 1974	412
1. New agreement on cooperation with a third country	412
2. Changes in the CMEA Statute	412
3. New CMEA organs	412
4. Enlargement of the activities of the CMEA affiliate organizations	413
5. A new CMEA affiliate organization	413
6. New joint amalgamations of the CMEA countries	414
7. New agreements on cooperation for developing the production of energy and particular products	415
8. Coordination of plans	416
9. New multilateral agreements on scientific and technical cooperation, on specialization and industrial cooperation	416
10. Other measures	417
Bibliography	417
 Comments of a western devil's advocate on Z. Kamecki, Z. Frank-Ossipoff
1. Introduction	418
2. The basically national character of the socialization of means of production	418
3. An initial weakness of the CMEA	420
4. The ill-defined legal framework character of the CMEA	421
5. The principle of sovereignty of the member States	422
6. The real impact of the western embargo	425
7. The difficulties of coordinating plans	428
8. The difficulties of production specialization	430

CONTENTS

XXI

9. The difficulties in promoting technical progress and research	432
10. The minor role played by international trade	434
11. Some difficulties in intra-CMEA trade	435
Bibliography	441
Index	443