

CONTENTS

1	“Working Numbers”—Introductory Remarks Markus J. Prutsch	1
Part I Historical Genesis of the Relation Between Science, Numbers and Politics
2	Historical Genesis of the Relation Between Science, Numbers and Politics—Part I Introduction Kelly L. Grotke and Stephen Hastings-King	21
3	“Lies, Damned Lies and State-istics”: Counting “Real Inhabitants” in the Census (Belgium, 1846–1947) Kaat Louckx	29
4	“What Use Is It in the Long Run to Resist Something That Is Bound to Happen Anyway?” The Statistical Mind Settling in Nineteenth-Century Politics Ida H. Stamhuis	57
5	Science, Numbers and Colonialism in the African Great Lakes, 1820–1910 Avel Utz	85

6	The Emergence of a Global Economic Order: From Scientific Internationalism to Infrastructural Globalism Anat Leibler	121
Part II Science and Politics Today
7	Science and Politics Today—Part II Introduction Kathrine von Graevenitz and Georg von Graevenitz	149
8	Politics and Policies of Statistical Independence Jean-Guy Prévost	153
9	Measuring, Modeling, Controlling the Climate? Numerical Expertise in U.S. Climate Engineering Politics Julia Schubert	181
10	What Counts in the Politics of Climate Change? Science, Scepticism and Emblematic Numbers Amanda Machin and Alexander Ruser	203
11	Kings and Indicators: Options for Governing Without Numbers Wolfgang Drechsler	227
Part III European and International Education Policies
12	European and International Education Policies—Part III Introduction Lars Lehmann and Markus J. Prutsch	265
13	Higher Purpose and Economic Reason: An Essay Concerning the Role of Numbers in European Education Policy Jörg J. Dötsch	271

14	Standardizing the Context and Contextualizing the Standard: Translating PISA into PISA-D	301
	Radhika Gorur, Estrid Sørensen and Bryan Maddox
15	“Let’s Talk Numbers”: Parliamentary Research in Educational Affairs in Light of a Political Demand for Quantification—The Knesset in Comparative Perspective	331
	Yuval Vurgan
16	Science, Numbers and Politics: Concluding Comments	365
	Lars Lehmann and Markus J. Prutsch
	Index	377