

CONTENTS

List of Tables	page ix
List of Figures	xix
Preface	xxiii
Acknowledgements	xxix

PART I. HYPOTHESES

Chapter I. The Classical View of Emigration	I
1. A dualism in classical thinking, p. 2. 2. Say's law and emigration, p. 3. 3. John Stuart Mill's version, p. 6. 4. Marx on over-population and colonization, p. 7. 5. The classical approach reconsidered, p. 10.
Chapter II. Free Trade and Displacement of Population	15
1. Non-competing groups, p. 15. 2. Mobility postulates of free trade theory, p. 17. 3. Wicksell on new countries, p. 19. 4. Static models: their uses and limitations, p. 22. 5. Internal mobility and international migration, p. 24.
Chapter III. Migration and an Expanding Economy	26
1. Innovations as a dynamic agent, p. 26. 2. The Atlantic economy as an evolving unit, p. 30. 3. Secular changes in social structure, p. 31. 4. Long swings, p. 32.

PART II. DESCRIPTION

Chapter IV. Statistical Sources	35
1. British migration statistics, p. 36. 2. The limitations of passenger figures, p. 38. 3. American sources, p. 42. 4. Puzzling features of American statistics, p. 45. 5. Board of Trade figures as a measure of aggregate net emigration, p. 50. 6. Estimates of net emigration of British-born to the United States, p. 52.
Chapter V. The Outflow from the United Kingdom	56
1. Countries of destination, p. 56. 2. Sex and age composition, p. 56. 3. Occupation and destination, p. 59. 4. Emigrants from the United Kingdom to the United States by national origin, p. 62. 5. Tendencies between the wars, p. 68.

Chapter VI. Irish Emigration 1846-1946

1. The direction of the outflow, p. 72. 2. Sex and age composition, p. 73. 3. The outflow since 1926, p. 75. 4. Effects on population structure, p. 77.

PART III. ANALYSIS

- Chapter VII.* Migration and the Rhythm of Economic Growth 83
 1. The trend, p. 84. 2. Transatlantic migration from Western Europe, p. 86. 3. A structural change in the late sixties?, p. 92. 4. The driving forces in the Old World, p. 94. 5. The supply of loanable funds; p. 96. 6. Migration, United States railway development and British exports, p. 99. 7. Migration and the building cycle, p. 102. 8. Migration, national income, wages and employment, p. 103. 9. The interaction of British and American long cycles, p. 108. 10. Fluctuations in Empire settlement, p. 113. 11. The 'push' element in the long cycles of migration, p. 116. 12. Secular changes in the Atlantic economy, p. 118.
- Chapter VIII.* Internal and International Mobility 123
 1. England and Wales, 1841-1911, p. 123. 2. Sweden, 1860-1930, p. 127. 3. The United States, 1870-1930, p. 130. 4. Canada and the American vortex, p. 134.
- Chapter IX.* The Social Ladder in the United States 139
 1. The statistical data, p. 139. 2. Social status of British and Irish immigrants, p. 141. 3. Movements into and out of particular occupations, p. 144. 4. Social-economic groups in 1910, p. 147. 5. Social structure and immigration, p. 152.
- Chapter X.* Immigration and Investment 155
 1. The time-shape of European emigration, p. 155. 2. Immigration and investment: a hypothesis, p. 158. 3. The verdict of lag analysis, p. 159. 4. Immigration and capital structure, p. 163. 5. Historical evidence, p. 166. 6. Conclusion, p. 174.
- Chapter XI.* Migration and Inverse Building Cycles 175
 1. The inverse relation, p. 175. 2. Fluctuations in foreign trade and building, p. 179. 3. An analysis of sequences, p. 183. 4. Conclusion, p. 188.
- Chapter XII.* The Origin and Impact of American Restrictions 190
 1. Public opinion on restrictions, p. 190. 2. Internal repercussions, p. 192. 3. Reactions on international migration, p. 195. 4. Agricultural production, p. 197. 5. International capital movements, p. 199.

PART IV. REAPPRAISAL

Chapter XIII.	Demographic Determinants of British and American Building Cycles, 1870-1913	202
	1. Statistical sources and methods, p. 204. 2. Regional building cycles, 1870-1910, p. 207. 3. Demographic determinants: regional and national, p. 214. 4. The alternation of British and American cycles, p. 218.
	Note on Sources and Methods	223
	1. Inhabited House Duty statistics, p. 223. 2. Profits assessed to Schedule D, p. 225. 3. Demographic data, p. 227.
Chapter XIV.	America-centred Interpretations of the Long Swing	230
	1. Spectral analysis of long swings, p. 230. 2. The gap in Schumpeter's system, p. 231. 3. One-sided interpretations, p. 234. 4. Limitations of America-centred models, p. 237.
Chapter XV.	The Atlantic Economy: the Process of Interaction	244
	1. The monetary factor, p. 246. 2. Outlines of an interaction model, p. 249. 3. Testing the assumptions, p. 250. 4. Long swings in Canada and Australia, p. 256. 5. The interaction process: real and monetary factors, p. 260. 6. Historical evidence, p. 265. 7. Conclusions, p. 280. 8. Long swings in productivity and real income, p. 283.
	Formal Statement of the Model	287
Chapter XVI.	Migration and Regional Growth in Britain	290
	1. Wales and the Atlantic economy, p. 290. 2. The southward shift of population, 1911-66, p. 295. 3. Regional growth of manufacturing, p. 297. 4. The new immigration, p. 300.
Chapter XVII.	The Dynamics of Brain Drain	306
	1. The statistical groundwork, p. 307. 2. The pattern of international flows, p. 308. 3. Canada: an intermediate country, p. 309. 4. Immigrants to America from developing countries, p. 311. 5. Immigration in relation to United States output of educated manpower, p. 314. 6. Britain's net balance, p. 315. 7. Dynamic shortage and brain drain, p. 318. 8. Conclusion, p. 327.
Chapter XVIII.	Negro Migration and the American Urban Dilemma	330
	1. The pattern of Negro migration, 1870-1950, p. 331. 2. Fertility and mortality, p. 333. 3. The impact on the cities, p. 338. 4. Assimilation or polarization? p. 340.

Epilogue	347
America and her periphery, 1946-71, p. 347. The passing of the Kuznets cycle? p. 353.
Appendix 1. A Method of Estimating Net Migration from Population Census Data	356
Appendix 2. Time-Series Analysis of Immigration and Investment: a method of locating reversals in direction of lag; and a summary of results	367
Appendix 3. A British Building Index 1911-50: method of construction	377
Appendix 4. Statistical Material	379
List of Works Cited	473
Index of Subjects	489
Index of Names	496