

Beasts of Burden

Biopolitics, Labor, and Animal Life in British Romanticism

Ron Broglio

SUNY
P R E S S

Contents

Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Chapter 1 Animal Life and Rural Labor: Literary and Material Resistance in Biopolitical Britain	1
Chapter 2 Docile Numbers and Stubborn Bodies: Population and the Problem of Multitude	15
Chapter 3 On Vulnerability: Studies from Life That Ought Not to Be Copied	35
Chapter 4 Wonder as Resistance: Sheep, Fairies, and James Hogg the Ettrick Shepherd	49
Chapter 5 Animal Dwelling in Natural History: Thomas Bewick, George Stubbs, and Corporality	67
Chapter 6 Man Proposes, Animality Disposes: Antihuman Landseer with Implications for Biopolitical Britain	91
Chapter 7 Afterword: Romanticism in the Dust of This Planet	113
Notes	133
Bibliography	151
Index	161