

CONTENTS

	Page
Publisher's note: the series 'Source + Sparta'	vii
Introductions and Acknowledgements Anton Powell and Nicolas Richer	ix
1 'One little skytalē ': Xenophon, truth-telling in his major works, and Spartan imperialism Anton Powell	1
2 The Lacedaemonian model in Xenophon's non-historical works (excluding the Cyropaedia) Nicolas Richer (trans. William E. Higgins)	65
3 Xenophon's portrayal of Sparta in the Hellenica , the Lakedaimonion Politeia and the Agésilaios Giovanna Daverio Rocchi (trans. Anton Powell)	109
4 Sparta and the Cyropaedia : the correct use of analogies Vincent Azoulay (trans. Maxime Shelledy)	129
5 The communication of history in Xenophon. The art of narration, the control of reception and happiness Gianluca Cuniberti (trans. Robert T. Valgenti)	161
6 Defining the difference: Xenophon and Spartan law Vivienne Gray	179
7 Xenophon and the myth of Lykourgos Ephraim David (trans. Anton Powell)	203
8 Foxes at home, lions abroad: Spartan commanders in Xenophon's Anabasis Ellen Millender	223

Contents

9	Xenophon and the Spartan economy Thomas J. Figueira	261
10	True history: Xenophon's Agesilaos and the encomiastic genre Noreen Humble	291
11	Xenophon presenting Agesilaos: the case of Phleious Pierre Pontier (trans. William E. Higgins)	319
12	Xenophon and the selection of the hippeis (Lak. Pol. 4.1–6) Jean Ducat	343
	Index	361