

Contents

Introduction: In Search of a Universal Meaning in Wagner	7
1. Adorno's Versuch and the Search for a New Figure of Wagner	9
2. Anti-Semitism and the Eclipse of Wagner's Ideal of a Universal Artwork	21
3. Contemporary Culture as a Framework for Recovering Wagner's Universality	29
4. Towards a Unified Conception of Wagner's Universality	45
I. Gesamtkunstwerk and Leitmotif	60
1. The Ring 's Leitmotifs in a Media Age	60
2. The Wagnerian Gesamtkunstwerk as a Totalitarian System	61
3. Reframing the Gesamtkunstwerk and the System of Leitmotifs	68
4. The Ending of Götterdämmerung and the Thought of Eternal Recurrence	92
II. Sensuousness	105
1. Tristan 's Sensuous Power in Light of the Israeli Ban on Wagner	105
2. Prelude and Liebestod in Jerusalem; or, Forbidden Love as a Transformative Power	109
3. The Meaning of Erotic Love/Desire	118
4. The Will to Live and the Spirit of Resignation	121
5. The Musical Expression of the Will	128
6. Wagnerian Sensuousness and the Dionysian Spirit	136
III. Germanness	156
1. Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg in an Age of Oikophobia	156
2. On the Patriotic yet Cosmopolitan Worldview Behind Die Meistersinger	164
3. Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg as a Tale of a Place Animated by Oikophilia	179
4. Die Meistersinger as a European Rather Than a German Work of Art	194
IV. Regeneration	214
1. Parsifal in an Age of Nihilism	214
2. Regeneration Through Compassion	225
3. Redemption Through the Pursuit of Knowledge	263
Epilogue: A Very Brief Reflection on Wagner's Relevance to the Contemporary World	288
Bibliography	290
Index	307