

Millennia of Language Change

Sociolinguistic Studies in Deep
Historical Linguistics

PETER TRUDGILL

University of Fribourg, Switzerland

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Acknowledgements	page viii
Prologue: the Long View	1
1 Prehistoric Sociolinguistics and the Uniformitarian Hypothesis: What Were Stone-Age Languages Like?	7
2 From Ancient Greek to Comanche: on Many Millennia of Complexification	17
3 First-Millennium England: a Tale of Two Copulas	37
4 The First Three Thousand Years: Contact in Prehistoric and Early Historic English	51
5 Verner's Law, Germanic Dialects and the English Dialect 'Default Singulars'	67
6 Deep into the Pacific: the Austronesian Migrations and the Linguistic Consequences of Isolation	77
7 The Hellenistic Koiné 320 BC to 550 AD and Its Medieval and Early Modern Congeners	89
8 Indo-European Feminines: Contact, Diffusion and Gender Loss around the North Sea	102
Sources	129
References	130
Index	152