

Contents

1	Introduction: Context, Form, and Content	1
1	Camus the Philosopher?	1
2	Philosophical Style: A Superficial Question?	4
3	On the Possibility of a Literary Philosophy	14
4	Camus' Philosophy: Some Preliminary Reflections	20
5	Camus' Struggles with Rhetorical Form	30
6	Chapter Conclusion	35
7	Chapter Summary	36
	References	43
2	A Post-Christian Ethics	47
1	Chapter Introduction	47
2	Camus the Christian?	48
3	'Dialogue Croyant-Incroyant'	51
4	Faith in Nature	56
5	Faith in Human Nature	62
6	Christianity and La Chute	64
7	Chapter Conclusion	66
	References	70

3	Narrating the Absurd	73
1	Chapter Introduction	73
2	Authenticity and the Form of Thought	75
3	The Phenomenology of Passé Composé	80
4	Doing Philosophy in Style	84
5	Chapter Conclusion	90
	References	94
4	Myths, Fables, Parables, Allegories	97
1	Chapter Introduction	97
2	Philosophy (and the World) as Fable	99
3	Political Allegory and Abstraction as a Force of Nature	102
4	Myth and the Metaphysics of L'Etranger	107
5	The Existentialist and the City of Salt	109
6	Chapter Conclusion	114
	References	117
5	Dialogic Ethics	121
1	Chapter Introduction	121
2	Morality and Ideology	123
3	Dialogics	127
4	Dialogical Games	131
5	Games of Dialogue	134
6	Case Conclusions	137
	References	143
A	Appendix: aliqua a and yo	147
1	Introduction	147
2	En Metaphysics	151
3	Sega no ang a e (a Mea g)	154
4	'eu fa e'	158
5	Cam s A sur e re	161
6	Cont C c si	161
	References	162

7	A Novelistic Afterlife	175
1	Chapter Introduction	175
2	From Meursault to Harun	177
3	Franciscan Knowledge and ‘What-It’s-Like-Ness’	180
4	Knowledge of the Other, from ‘The Other’	184
5	Faith and Redemption: Meursault’s Defence	189
6	Chapter Conclusion	192
	References	195
8	Conclusion: Ethics Through Interdisciplinarity	197
	References	200
	Index	201