

Contents

1	Introduction: The Philosophy of Linguistics	1
1.1	Introductory Remarks	1
1.2	Is Linguistics a Science at all?	2
1.3	The Realist Challenge in Contemporary Philosophy of Science	6
1.4	The Hermeneutic Challenge	10
1.5	Forms of Functional Explanation in Linguistics	14
2	A Realist Theory of Linguistics	18
2.1	Introduction	18
2.2	Positivist versus Realist Conceptions of Laws and Explanations	18
2.3	Functionalism and Language Change I: Purposes and Effects	29
2.4	Functionalism and Language Change II: Parts and Wholes	35
2.5	Positivism, Hermeneutics, and Lapsed Positivism	39
2.6	Concluding Remarks	42
3	What is a Language?	43
3.1	Introduction	43
3.2	Languages as Natural Kinds	45
3.3	Languages as Abstract Objects	49
3.4	Languages as Names	54
3.5	Languages as Social Facts which are Linguistic Facts	57
3.6	Languages as Social Facts which are not Linguistic Facts	73
4	From Nativism to Sociolinguistics: Integrating a Theory of Language Growth with a Theory of Speech Practices	81
4.1	Introduction	81
4.2	Nativist Assumptions	82

4.3	Nativism as an Anarchist Theory	91
4.4	Culture Against Nature: Cultural Norms and Speech Adaptations	95
4.5	Some Remarks on the Role of Introspection and Intuition in Linguistics	99
5	Using and Defending Cognitive Theory	105
5.1	Introduction	105
5.2	Mind as the Missing Third Term in Nature-Culture Arguments	105
5.3	Defending a Cognitivist Concept of Mind	110
5.4	The Personal and the Sub-Personal: Beliefs and Sub-Doxastic States	115
6	Wittgensteinians and Chomskyans	120
6.1	Introduction	120
6.2	'Chomskyans treat something essentially social as if it were essentially individual'	122
6.3	'Chomskyans treat something essentially public (outer) as if it were essentially private (inner)'	132
6.4	'Chomskyans treat something we ascribe on the basis of successful practice as the cause of that success'	136
6.5	'Chomskyans treat something rule-like and normative as something law-like and predictive'	140
6.6	'Chomskyans treat something open-ended (creative) as something closed'	144
6.7	Conclusions	146
7	Conventions in the Life of Language	147
7.1	Introduction	147
7.2	Presentation of Lewis's Account of Convention in relation to the Actual Language Relationship	148
7.3	Is a Convention of Truthfulness and Trust Necessary or Sufficient to the Actual Language Relationship?	152
7.4	Two Concepts of Truthfulness	161

	Contents	xiii
7.5	Why are Truthfulness and Trust Important?	166
7.6	Concluding Remarks	173
	Bibliography	175
	Index	191