

Contents

Preface		v
Chapter I	Advertising as social discourse	1
1.	Introductory remarks	1
1.1	A schematic history of advertising	4
1.1.1	The modern era	8
1.1.2	Positioning and image-creation	11
1.1.3	The era of persuasion	14
1.1.4	The entrenchment of advertising in social discourse	15
1.2	The semiotic approach to advertising	19
1.2.1	Signification systems	20
1.2.2	A brief trek through the history of semiotics	24
1.2.3	Case-in-point 1: High heel shoes	26
1.3	The role of semiotics in the advertising debate	30
1.3.1	Semiotics as a form of immunization	31
1.3.2	The partnership with psychology	32
1.3.3	Cognitive style	35
1.4	Elements of semiotic analysis	36
1.4.1	Axioms	37
1.4.2	Notions	38
1.4.3	Meaning	43
1.4.4	Case-in-point 2: An ad for a sparkling wine	46
Chapter II	Creating recognizability for the product	49
2.	Introductory remarks	49
2.1	Creating a signification system	50
2.1.1	Brand names	52

2.1.2	Logos	61
2.1.3	Iconicity	62
2.2	Creating textuality	62
2.2.1	Features of ad texts	65
2.2.2	Decoding	70
2.2.3	Mythologizing the product	73
2.3	Using multiple media	77
2.3.1	Print media	77
2.3.2	Electronic media	79
2.4	Ad campaigns	81
2.4.1	Cooption	86
2.4.2	Creating history	88
 Chapter III Creating textuality		 95
3.	Introductory remarks	95
3.1	Textuality	97
3.1.1	Layout and design	97
3.1.2	Ambiguity	101
3.2	Connotation	102
3.2.1	Connotative chains	103
3.2.2	The connotative index	108
3.2.3	Intertextuality	110
3.3	Verbal techniques	112
3.3.1	Figurative language	113
3.3.2	Other rhetorical devices	120
3.4	Nonverbal techniques	123
3.4.1	Modeling	123
3.4.2	A synthesis	129

Chapter IV Advertising and culture	131
4.    Introductory remarks	131
4.1    Market testing the product's signification system	132
4.1.1    Case study 1: Determining signification systems	133
4.1.2    Case study 2: Co-branding	137
4.1.3    Other techniques	143
4.2    Advertising culture	145
4.2.1    The advertising industry	148
4.2.2    Promoting consumerism	149
4.2.3    Advertising as art	151
4.3    The semiotic purview	153
4.3.1    The effects of advertising	153
4.3.2    Final reflections	157
Appendix: Exercises for classroom or personal study use	161
Glossary of technical terms	167
Works cited and general bibliography	175
Index	191