

Table of Contents

Foreword	VII
Introduction	IX
Abbreviations	XII
I. The period from 253 to 268 A.D. The Roman Empire in the middle of the third century	I
Par. 1. The wars waged by Valerian and Gallienus	I
Par. 2. The Roman Empire in the middle of the third century	9
II. Gallienus' military, administrative and financial policy. The military orientation of his government and his emperorship	23
Par. 1. Valerian and Gallienus	23
Par. 2. Military strategy and tactics	26
Par. 3. Gallienus and the officers	37
Par. 4. Gallienus' policy concerning the government of various provinces	47
Par. 5. The rise of the "Illyrians" under Gallienus	55
Par. 6. Gallienus and the senators. The background of Gallienus' policy regarding the appointment of officers and governors	57
Par. 7. Concluding remarks about Gallienus' military and administrative policy	83
Par. 8. Gallienus' monetary policy and his financial administration	87
Par. 9. The military character of many legends and representations on Gallienus' coins	100
Par. 10. Conclusion	116
III. Gallienus' conception of the emperorship	120
Par. 1. Gallienus as the prince of peace and the bringer of prosperity. Peace propaganda; Gallienus as divine hero and saviour. Keiser Novum saeculum aureum. Augustus and Hadrian as Gallienus' models	120
Par. 2. Gallienus' merita and virtutes as justification of his rule	135
Par. 3. Gallienus as god-emperor. His self-identification with certain deities	148

Par. 4. Gallienus under the special protection of the Gods. Gallienus' favourite divinities (Gallienus and Apollo; Gallienus and Sol)	159
Par. 5. The accentuation of Gallienus' majesty in ceremonies and the plastic arts.	169
Par. 6. Conclusion	173
IV. Gallienus' religious policy. Gallienus and Plotinus	175
Par. 1. Gallienus and the Christians	175
Par. 2. Gallienus, Eleusis and Plotinus. Alföldi's hypothesis	185
V. The Gallienic Renaissance	194
VI. Conclusions	205
Bibliography	216
Index.	231