

Contents

---

Preface	page ix
Part I Introduction
1 Issues in neurolinguistics and linguistic aphasiology	3
2 Approaches to neurolinguistics and linguistic aphasiology	17
Part II Clinical aphasiology and neurolinguistics
3 The discoveries of Paul Broca: localization of the "faculty for articulate language"	43
4 Classical connectionist models	49
5 Extensions of connectionism	65
6 Objections to connectionism	79
7 Hierarchical models	89
8 Global models	105
9 Process models	119
10 Overview of clinical aphasiology and neurolinguistics	133
Part III Linguistic aphasiology
11 Linguistic descriptions and aphasic syndromes	143
12 Disturbances of lexical semantic representation	159
13 Disturbances of the sound system	201
14 Acquired dyslexia	233
15 Disturbances of sentence production: agrammatism	261
16 Disturbances of sentence comprehension	295
17 Overview of linguistic aphasiology	328
Part IV Contemporary neurolinguistics
18 Cerebral dominance and specialization for language	345
19 Cerebral localization for language revisited	369
20 Cerebral evoked potentials and language	403
21 Electrical stimulation of the language areas	417
22 Towards a theoretical neurophysiology of language	432
23 Overview of contemporary neurolinguistics	452
References	461
Author index	477
Subject index	481