

Contents

General Editor's Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	i
1 The orality of language	5
The literate mind and the oral past	5
Did you say 'oral literature'?	10
2 The modern discovery of primary oral cultures	16
Early awareness of oral tradition	16
The Homeric question	17
Milman Parry's discovery	20
Consequent and related work	27
3 Some psychodynamics of orality	31
Sounded word as power and action	31
You know what you can recall: mnemonics and formulas	33
Further characteristics of orally based thought and expression	36
(i) Additive rather than subordinative	37
(ii) Aggregative rather than analytic	38
(iii) Redundant or 'copious'	39

vi Contents

	(iv) Conservative or traditionalist	41
	(v) Close to the human lifeworld	42
	(vi) Agonistically toned	43
	(vii) Empathetic and participatory rather than objectively distanced	45
	(viii) Homeostatic	46
	(ix) Situational rather than abstract	49
✕	Oral memorization	57
	Verbomotor lifestyle	68
	The noetic role of heroic 'heavy' figures and of the bizarre	69
	The interiority of sound	71
✕	Orality, community and the sacral	74
	Words are not signs	75
4	Writing restructures consciousness	78
	The new world of autonomous discourse	78
	Plato, writing and computers	79
	Writing is a technology	81
	What is 'writing' or 'script'?	83
	Many scripts but only one alphabet	85
	The onset of literacy	93
	From memory to written records	96
	Some dynamics of textuality	101
	Distance, precision, grapholects and magnavocabularies	103
	Interactions: rhetoric and the places	108
	Interactions: learned languages	112
	Tenaciousness of orality	115
5	Print, space and closure	117
	Hearing-dominance yields to sight-dominance	117
	Space and meaning	123
	(i) Indexes	123
	(ii) Books, contents and labels	126
	(iii) Meaningful surface	126
	(iv) Typographic space	128
	More diffuse effects	130
	Print and closure: intertextuality	132
	Post-typography: electronics	135

6	Oral memory, the story line and characterization	139
	The primacy of the story line	139
	Narrative and oral cultures	140
	Oral memory and the story line	141
	Closure of plot: travelogue to detective story	147
	The 'round' character, writing and print	151
7	Some theorems	156
	Literary history	157
	New Criticism and Formalism	160
	Structuralism	164
	Textualists and deconstructionists	165
	Speech-act and reader-response theory	170
	Social sciences, philosophy, biblical studies	172
	Orality, writing and being human	174
	'Media' versus human communication	175
	The inward turn: consciousness and the text	178
	Bibliography	180
	Index	196