Preface xi

I
Pragmatic Deviance 1

1. The scope of linguistics 1
2. The issue of deviance 3
2.1. Pragmatic deviance 4
2.1.1. Speech act deviance 5
2.1.2. Indexical deviance 8
2.2. The freezing of pragmatic deviance 9
2.3. Grice's theory of conversational implicature 11
3. Summary 12

II
The Problem of Linguistically Deviant Expressions 14

1. The orthodox transformational-generative approach to deviant sentences; some early views 14
1.1. Chomsky 15
1.2. Ziff 16
1.3. Katz (1964) 17
1.4. Summary 18
2.1. Weinreich's proposal 18
2.2. Katz (1972) 21
2.3. Jackendoff 22
2.4. Additional remarks on Weinreich's proposal 23
3.1. Extensions of Weinreich's proposal: Baumgärtner 25
3.2. Abraham and Braunmüller 27
3.3. Van Dijk 28
4. Aggrammatization 30

III
Modes of Construal 33

1.1. Semantic representation of The stone died 33
2.1. Anomalous and contradictory sentences 35

2.2. Restricted feature transfer 38
2.3. Need for freer functioning of feature transfer 39
3.1. The positioning of transfer features 40
4. The six modes of construal 43
4.1. Adjunction 44
4.1.1. $N \leftarrow V$; disjunctive reading 44
4.1.2. $N \leftarrow V$; conjunctive reading 44
4.1.3. $N \rightarrow V$; disjunctive reading 44
4.1.4. $N \rightarrow V$; conjunctive reading 46
4.2. Displacement 47
4.2.1. $N \leftarrow V$ 47
4.2.2. $N \rightarrow V$ 47
4.3. Six interpretations of The stone died 48
4.3.1. The six underlying transformations 48
4.4. Ordinary language exemplifications of the six construal routes 49
4.4.1. Discussion of 4.4a 51
4.4.2. Discussion of 4.4b 53
4.4.3. Discussion of 4.4c 53
4.4.4. Discussion of 4.4d 53
4.4.5. Discussion of 4.4e 54
4.4.6. Discussion of 4.4f 55
4.5. Extension of meaning 55
5.1. Comparison of our six modes of construal with the modes of van Dijk 55

IV
The Construal Rules 60

1.1. The semantic component 60
2. Adjunction and displacement of semantic markers 62
2.1. Adjunction 62
2.1.1. $N \leftarrow V$; disjunctive reading 62
2.1.2. $N \rightarrow V$; disjunctive reading 64
2.1.3. $N \leftarrow V$; conjunctive reading 68
2.1.4. $N \rightarrow V$; conjunctive reading 69
2.2. Displacement 71
2.2.1. $N \leftarrow V$ 71
2.2.2. $N \rightarrow V$ 72
3.1. Some differences between construal on $N \leftarrow V$ and $N \rightarrow V$ 73
4.1. On the relation of the construal rules to the grammar 75

V
Comparison of the Theory (T) with Other Theories of Metaphor 78

1. The theories of Aristotle and Quintilian 78
1.1. Quintilian 81
1.2. Limitations of Quintilian's account 84
1.3. Aristotle 85
1.3.1. Aristotle's first two types 86
1.3.2. Aristotle's third type 90
1.3.3. Aristotle's fourth type (analogy) 91
2.1. The problem of encyclopedic knowledge 95
3.1. Le groupe μ 99

VI
Metaphor and Truth 104

1. Semantic deviance taken literally 104
1.1. Nondenoting singular terms 104
1.2. Nondenoting general terms 105
1.3. The difference between semantic deviance and failure of denotation 106
2.1. Ryle's position on semantic deviance 107
2.2. Semantic deviance and oblique contexts 108
2.3. Refutation of Ryle's position 110
3.1. Indirect evidence for the conceivability of "absurd" states of affairs 113
4.1. The implicit context of poems 115
5.1. Truth conditions of deviant sentences in a poem 119

VII
Poetic Metaphor 127

1. Linguistic and poetic construal 127
1.1. The status of nondeviant expressions in poetry 128
1.2. Phenomenalistic construal 131
2.1. The role of simile 134
3.1. Intensional and extensional semantics of metaphor 135
