

CONTENTS

PREFACE	v
CONTRIBUTORS	xxiii
MAPS	xxiv
ILLUSTRATIONS	xxv
ABBREVIATIONS	xxvii
NOTE ON DATING	xxxviii
INTRODUCTION: EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY IRELAND by J. C. Beckett	xxxix
I THE ESTABLISHMENT OF PROTESTANT ASCENDANCY, 1691-1714 by J. G. Simms
Ascendancy and colonial nationalism	1
Sidney (1692-4) and Capell (1695-6) as lord lieutenant	2
William's expedients: applying the articles of Limerick and Galway, 1692-7	3
Anne's viceroys	4
The war of the Spanish succession	5
Molyneux's Case of Ireland , 1698	5
Proposals for parliamentary union, 1703-9	7
Economy and society	8
Dublin: trade and culture	8
Cork: rural Ireland	9
The Williamite land settlement	10
Wool and linen legislation, 1695-9	13
Timber and cooperage	15
The penal laws	16
Security, ascendancy and property	16
Catholic disabilities, 1695; the banishment act, 1697	16
Registration of clergy, 1704; the oath of abjuration, 1709	18
The 'popery act', 1704	18
Social and political effects	19
The established church	21
Financial problems	22
The presbyterian challenge	23
Immigrant dissenters	25
The change to tory government, 1710	27
Parliamentary disputes: Trinity College and resurgent jacobitism	28
A new parliament, 1713	29
Jacobite expectations thwarted, 1714	30

II THE SOCIAL STRUCTURE AND SOCIAL LIFE, 1714-60

by J. L. McCracken

Population	31
Emigration	32
Poverty and famine	33
Composition of population	34
Members of the established church	34
Catholics	37
Presbyterians	39
Huguenots	41
Palatines and quakers	41
Landscape in transition	42
Regional variations	43
The towns	44
Development of Dublin	44
Improvement of estates	45
Upper-class life: consumption, amusements, travel	46
Parliament winter in Dublin	49
Charity: welfare, hospitals, and schools	50
Trinity College, Dublin	50
The lesser gentry	51
The army and Irish society	51
Social diversity	53
Gaelic society in subjection	53
Social mingling	55

III THE POLITICAL STRUCTURE, 1714-60

by J. L. McCracken

The lord lieutenantancy	57
The lords justices	61
The privy council and Poynings' law	64
The legal establishment	66
The superior courts	66
The judges	66
Grand jury and assizes	67
The King's Inns	67
Justices of the peace and quarter sessions	68
Borough and manor courts	69
Administration	69
Judges and law officers	69
Fiscal administration	70
The chief secretary	70
The house of lords	71
The house of commons	72
Constituencies and franchise	72

Contents

ix

Elections, influence, and management	74
Members	77
Ascendancy and dependency	77
Local administration	78
Grand juries	78
Manor courts, vestries, and quarter sessions	79
Turnpike trusts	80
Corporations	80
Corporation of Dublin	81
The army	82
IV THE ECCLESIASTICAL STRUCTURE, 1714-60
	by J. L. McCracken
The state church	84
Diocesan organisation and hierarchy	84
Parishes and benefices	86
Problems of the church	86
Lack of zeal	88
Individual dedication	90
The Roman Catholic church	91
Reorganisation of dioceses and hierarchy	91
Regular clergy	92
Parish priests and churches	92
Synods	94
Holydays and pilgrimages	94
Schools	95
The penal laws: laxity and severity	95
Problems: support, training, and discipline of clergy; popular superstition	96
The presbyterian church	99
The influence of Scotland	99
Regional organisation: the presbyteries	99
Ministers	100
The laity	101
Disabilities	101
Internal controversies: 'new light'; secession; burghers and anti-burghers; covenants	103
V PROTESTANT ASCENDANCY AND THE RISE OF COLONIAL NATIONALISM, 1714-60
	by J. L. McCracken
Character of the ascendancy	105
The Hanoverian succession, 1714	108
Attempt to remove the sacramental test, 1715-19	109
Appellate jurisdiction: the case of Sherlock v. Annesley , 1719-20	110
Disaffection from England; the 'Wood's halfpence' crisis, 1722-5	111
Twenty years lull: the regime of primate and speaker	114
The sacramental test question revived, 1731	116
Rise of the Ponsonbys	117

The Lucas affair, 1749-50	118
The surplus revenue dispute, 1751-6	119
Bedford lord lieutenant, 1757-61	121

VI ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, 1691-1750

by L. M. Cullen

Historiography	123
The shadow of Froude	123
Butt, Sigerson, and Prendergast	125
Hely Hutchinson's Commercial restraints	126
Lecky	127
Corkery and the 'hidden Ireland'	129
A century of growth	130
The woollen act of 1699	131
English fears of Irish competition	131
The recovery of the 1690s	132
Scottish immigration	133
Currency and exchange rates	135
Fall in prices, 1701	137
Later views of the woollen act	138
Depression and recovery	142
Long-term stagnation and short-term fluctuations	144
Famine and the economy	146
The boom of the late 1740s and 1750s; the reduced shadow of famine	148
Credit crises	150
Banking: function and development	151
Merchants and banking	153
Rents and public revenue as sources of banking capital: Nathaniel Clements	154
Phases of expansion	157

VII ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, 1750-1800

by L. M. Cullen

A new threshold of the economy	159
The 'gap in the famines': diet and population growth	159
The influence of the land system	163
The potato	164
Land tenure and rural society	166
Tenant farmers	166
Labourers and migration	169
Spinning	170
Absenteeism and the balance of payments	172
Middlemen	173
Improvement and estate management; rising landlord incomes	177
Estate villages and other investment	178
Indebtedness	179
Environmental revolution	180
Urban change	181

Sugar and brewing	182
Markets and communications	183
Estimates of national income: the scale of expansion in the eighteenth century	185
Foreign trade	187
Smuggling: questions of assessment	187
The outward flow	188
The inward flow	189
Changing trends: large-scale organisation	191
‘Commercial restraints’	192
The effect of the navigation acts	193
VIII COLONIAL NATIONALISM AND THE WINNING OF PARLIAMENTARY INDEPENDENCE, 1760-82 by R. B. McDowell
Stirrings of discontent	196
George III's first parliament, 1761	197
Upsurge of agrarian disorder: Ulster, Munster	200
Reaction against penal laws: the Catholic Committee and parliament, 1760-78	202
The change to resident viceroys: Townshend, 1767-72	204
Growing parliamentary recalcitrance: dispute on augmented military expenditure, 1768	204
Continued opposition to Townshend, 1769-72	208
Harcourt lord lieutenant, 1772-6: conciliation and balanced budgets	209
Proposed absentee tax, 1773	210
Tontine bill and stamp bill, 1773-4	212
Outbreak of war with the American colonies, 1775; Irish sympathies with the colonists	213
Agitation against the war	214
The war and Irish politics	215
Withdrawal of troops	216
Embargo on exporting provisions, 1776	217
Economic effects of war	218
Proposal for a militia, 1778	219
Commercial relations, 1778-9	220
Rise of the Volunteer movement, 1778	222
The government's search for an Irish policy, 1779	223
Free trade, 1779-80	225
Upsurge of national feeling, 1780	226
Demand for legislative independence, 1781-2	229
Lord North succeeded as British prime minister by Rockingham, Mar. 1782	231
Grattan's speech on the address (16 Apr.)	232

Declaratory act repealed; Poynings' law amended; habeas corpus act; mutiny act; judges act	233
Catholic relief measures, 1778-82; sacramental test repealed, 1782	233
Character of the settlement of 1782	233
IX LAND AND PEOPLE, c.1780	by J. H. Andrews
Sources; Young's Tour	236
Country houses and demesnes	237
Limitations to improvement	240
Tenant farming: partnership and rundale	241
The arable counties: corn and potatoes	244
The corn trade	246
Linen and the northern farmer	248
Cattle and sheep	249
Dairying	254
Roads	254
Inland waterways	257
Seaport towns	259
Inland towns	261
The urban contribution to Irish life	261
Pressure of population	264
X PARLIAMENTARY INDEPENDENCE, 1782-9	by R. B. McDowell
Limitations on parliamentary independence	265
Continuance of British control	266
Movement for parliamentary reform	266
Agitation for renunciation of legislative control	269
The Dungannon Volunteer convention, 8 September 1783	270
The national Volunteer convention, November-December 1783	270
Flood's reform bill defeated, 29 November 1783, 20 March 1784	271
Tariff reform agitation, 1783-4	273
Reform congress in Dublin, 1784-5	274
The administration regains confidence: Pitt's Irish policy	275
Attempt to settle Anglo-Irish commercial relations, 1784-5	277
Opposition in Ireland and Britain; the scheme dropped, 1785	280
Munster agitation against tithes, 1785	282
The regency crisis, 1788-9	283
Emergence of the 'Irish whigs': attack on government influence in parliament, 1789	285
The Dublin police act, 1786: Dublin politics, 1786-90	287
XI THE AGE OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN: REFORM AND REACTION, 1789-94	by R. B. McDowell
Impact of the French revolution; rise of radicalism	289
William Drennan and Theobald Wolfe Tone	291

Bastille day in Belfast, 14 July 1791	293
Formation of the Belfast Society of United Irishmen, 14 Oct. 1791	294
Formation of the Dublin Society of United Irishmen, 9 Nov. 1791	294
Character of the Dublin Society	295
Parliamentary reform and catholic enfranchisement	298
Attitude of radicals to the crown, the house of lords, and the link with Britain	300
The radicals' concept of an independent Ireland	300
Renewed pressure for catholic relief, 1790	302
Conservatives v. radicals within the Catholic Committee, 1790-92	303
Pitt's ministry and the catholic question: policy of generous concession, Dec. 1791	306
Westmorland and the case for ascendancy, 1792	308
Reaction of the Irish establishment to British proposals	309
Langrishe's relief bill and the petition of the Catholic Committee, 1792	310
Tone appointed assistant secretary to the committee, 25 July 1792	314
Preparations for a catholic convention	315
Convention meets in Tailors' Hall, Dublin, 3-8 Dec. 1792; petition to the king	316
Deputation takes petition to London via Belfast, Dec. 1792	317
Hobart's relief bill introduced, 4 Feb. 1793; becomes law, 9 Apr.	318
Catholic reaction	321
Northern radicalism, 1791-2	322
United Irish movement in Dublin; the Tandy affair, 1792	324
Radicalism and the catholics, 1792	325
Revival of the Volunteers; the Ulster reform convention at Dungannon, 15-16 Feb. 1793	326
Dublin contemplates a national convention; 'first national battalion' formed, Dec. 1792	328
The government's reaction; suppression of the new Volunteers, Dec. 1792	329
Convention act, 1793	331
Legal offensive against radicals, 1793-4	332
Legislation of 1793	334
Whig pressure for reform weakened by war and government's concessions	336
The session of 1794	338
XII THE AGE OF THE UNITED IRISHMEN: REVOLUTION AND THE UNION, 1794-1800
by R. B. McDowell
Significance of 1794-5 in Irish politics	339
The whig split and the Pitt-Portland coalition, July 1794	339
Fitzwilliam lord lieutenant, Jan.-Feb. 1795	340

Renewed agitation for catholic emancipation, December 1794	342
New broom at the Castle, January 1795	343
Grattan's relief bill, 12 Feb. 1795; the cabinet recalls Fitzwilliam; impact of disappointment	345
Revival of agrarian violence: Defenders and the birth of Orange societies, 1795	346
Radicalism goes underground: reconstitution of the United Irishmen, 1794-5	347
Prospects of French intervention; the Hoche expedition, December 1796	349
Developing emergency: whig and conservative responses; whigs leave parliament, May 1797	351
Insurrection act, March 1796; yeomanry; suspension of habeas corpus; Lake's disarming of Ulster, 1796-7	352
Leinster executive of United Irishmen arrested, 12 March 1798	354
The rising of 1798	355
Leinster	357
Ulster	359
Wexford; Vinegar Hill (21 June)	359
Humbert's expedition, August-September; capture and death of Tone, 3-19 November	359
Government attitude to the defeated	361
Union as a solution for Irish problems	362
Formulation of proposals	364
Parliamentary representation	365
The established church	366
Financial arrangements	367
British acceptance; Irish controversy	367
The process of securing acceptance, 1799-1800	368
Ireland's adjustment to the union	370

XIII IRISH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE, 1691-1845

by Brian Ó Cuív

Abandonment of the Irish language begins	374
Use of Irish to promote the protestant religion	374
Work of 'Bible' societies	376
Attitude of catholic authorities towards Irish	378
Catholic priests educated in continental seminaries	379
English the dominant language in St Patrick's College, Maynooth	380
'Hedge' schools, 'national' schools, and the decline of Irish	380
Philip Barron and Thomas Davis	382
Numbers of Irish-speakers in eighteenth and nineteenth centuries	383
Changing the form of the Irish language: orthography, metrical form, linguistic borrowing	387
Few works in Irish printed; consequent importance of scribal activity	390

Contents

xv

Edward Lhuyd's contribution to the study of Irish	392
Dublin scribal group, headed by Sean Ó Neachtain	393
Aodh Buidhe Mac Cruitín	396
Learned activity outside Dublin: Roderick O'Flaherty, Tadg Ó Rodaighe, Sean Ó Gadhra, Turlough Carolan and others in Connacht	398
'Párlíament na mBan' by Domhnall Ó Colmáin of Cork	400
Sir James Cotter as patron and his son James	401
Poetry in the eighteenth century	402
Munster poets; the Blarney dámhscoil and similar gatherings	403
Sean Ó Murchadha na Ráithíneach	404
Aodhagán Ó Rathaille	405
Aisling or 'vision' poetry	406
Eoghan Ruadh Ó Súilleabháin	406
Brian Merriman's 'Cúirt an Mheán Oíche'	407
Poets in Connacht, Ulster, and North Leinster; 'Caoineadh Airt Í Laoghaire'	408
Poems illustrative of political and social history	409
Religious poetry	410
Religious prose works	410
Tales	411
Other prose writings	411
Dáibídh de Barra	412
Amhlaoibh Ó Súilleabháin	412
Use of Irish in politics	413
Interest in Irish in Belfast	413
Charles O'Connor and John Fergus	414
Irish-speaking club in Dublin	415
Irish scribes in Dublin	416
Joseph Walker's Historical memoirs of the Irish bards (1786) and Charlotte Brooke's Reliques of Irish poetry (1789)	416
Learned Irish societies; Royal Irish Academy, 1785	417
A war office notice in Irish (1806)	417
Government support for Irish studies	418
The ordnance survey: Edward O'Reilly, O'Donovan, and O'Curry	418
Appendix
I Numbers of Irish speakers in certain age-groups in 1851	420
II Percentages of Irish speakers in certain age-groups in 1851	422
 XIV LITERATURE IN ENGLISH, 1691-1800
by J. C. Beckett
Literature and the ascendancy	424
The colonial tradition	425
Absence of an 'Anglo-Irish literature'	426
The economics of authorship	427

The English audience	429
The pull of London on Irish authors: Thomas Southerne, Richard Steele, George Farquhar	430
Swift: the tension between Irish origin and English aspiration	432
Thomas Parnell	435
George Berkeley	436
Nicholas Brady and Nahum Tate	438
John Toland	438
Samuel Boyse	439
The Dublin Weekly Journal	439
Patrick Delany	440
Northern presbyterian orientation towards Scotland	440
Francis Hutcheson; John Abernethy	441
Samuel Madden	442
Samuel Burdy's Life of Skelton (1792)	442
James Delacour	443
Irish writers from the mid-eighteenth century: writing becomes a profession	443
Elizabeth Ryves	444
The Sheridan family	444
Richard Brinsley Sheridan	446
Oliver Goldsmith	447
Theatrical careers: Hugh Kelly; Charles Macklin	450
The theatre in Irish society	452
Irish subjects for literature: Maria Edgeworth and Castle Rackrent (1800)	453
Thomas Dermody	454
Political writing: William Molyneux's Case of Ireland (1698)	456
Swift's Drapier's letters (1724) and other pamphlets	457
Berkeley's Querist (1735-7)	460
Henry Brooke	461
Edmund Burke	462
Thomas Campbell, John Hely Hutchinson, William Drennan, Theobald Wolfe Tone, Alexander Knox	464
Parliamentary oratory	466
The study of Irish antiquity: Roderick O'Flaherty	467
Hugh MacCurtin, Charles O'Connor, Sylvester O'Halloran	467
Charlotte Brooke	468
Joseph Cooper Walker	469
XV THE VISUAL ARTS, 1603-1740	by Anne Crookshank
Architecture in the early seventeenth century	471
Emergence of the architect; availability of trained labour	471
New towns	472

Contents

xvii

Expansion of older towns	473
Dublin	474
Castles and country houses	475
Sculpture	478
Development of classical vocabulary in architecture	479
Post-restoration architecture	480
Sir William Robinson	480
Country houses: the late seventeenth century	481
Thomas Burgh	483
Country houses: the early eighteenth century	483
Castletown House, County Kildare	485
Sir Edward Lovett Pearce	485
The Parliament House, Dublin	486
Richard Castle: his work on the Newry canal; his country houses	487
Sculpture: William Kidwell	489
Painting	490
Slow early development	490
Patronage in the restoration period; the duke of Ormond	490
Portrait painting: Garret Morphey	491
Early eighteenth-century painters: James Latham	495
Development of landscape painting: William van der Hagen	497
XVI THE VISUAL ARTS, 1740-1850	by Anne Crookshank
Architecture, 1740-1800	499
Growth of provincial towns; newly planned villages and suburbs	499
Armagh, Waterford, and Newry; early industrial buildings	500
Belfast and Cork	501
Davis Ducart; the Tyrone and Boyne navigations	503
The development of Dublin; the wide streets commissioners; the royal exchange competition	503
Thomas Cooley, Thomas Ivory, Sir William Chambers	505
James Gandon: the Custom House; his patronage of Edward Smyth; his other Dublin buildings; his provincial buildings	507
Country houses: the 'agricultural layout'; James Wyatt; development of gardens	508
Sculpture	510
John van Nost	510
Patrick Cunningham	510
Medallists	511
Christopher Hewetson	511
Interiors	511
Plasterwork; foreign and Irish stuccoedores	511
Formation of picture collections	512
Furniture	513
Delftware, silver, and glass	514
Other applied arts	517
The development of art education: the Dublin Society schools	517
Painting	519
Art exhibitions	519

Pastellists: Hugh Douglas Hamilton and Robert Healy	520
Portrait painters: Robert Hunter and foreigners in Ireland	520
The Irish working abroad: Nathaniel Hone, Thomas Hickey, James Barry	521
Landscape painting: the Irish in Rome	523
George Barret, Thomas Roberts, William Ashford, Nathaniel Grogan	525
Watercolour	527
Decorative mural painting	527
Miniaturists	528
The effect of the act of union	528
Architecture, 1800-50	528
New forms of building and patronage: gaols, law courts, barracks	528
Francis Johnston and Richard Morrison	530
Church building	531
The Deane and Pain families	534
Canal and railway building	534
The development of the board of works and county surveyors	535
Sculpture	536
Thomas Kirk; the Farrell family; John Hogan	536
Vernacular tombstones	537
Painting	538
Development of societies and provincial art schools	538
New patronage	538
Petrie; Danby; O'Connor; Maclise	540
XVII MUSIC BEFORE 1700	by Brian Boydell
Lack of evidence for music before 1600	542
Liturgical music	543
Secular music	544
The harp	544
Dancing; instruments	545
The seventeenth century: European art music and Gaelic traditional music	546
Church music: the Dublin cathedrals	548
Church music outside Dublin	550
Municipal music in Dublin	552
Theatre music	555
The music public	556
Gaelic music and the disruption of Gaelic society	558
The harpers and their music	559
Carolan	562
Pipers	563
Songs; external influences	564
Dance music	566
XVIII MUSIC, 1700-1850	by Brian Boydell
Ireland and European musical culture	568

Contents

xix

The social context of musical performance	570
Cathedral and state music	574
The beginning of large public performances	576
Venues for performance	577
The Musical Academy	583
The Irish Musical Fund	585
Music in the theatre	586
The professional musician	587
Theatre orchestras	587
The ridotto	589
Ballad opera and comic opera	589
Handel; 'Comus'; Purcell	591
French and German opera	593
Italian opera	593
Increasing Irishness	596
Irish composers	597
The Roseingrave family	598
Henry Delamaine, Philip Cogan, Sir John Stevenson	599
Timothy Geary, Thomas Carter, Thomas Cooke, Michael Kelly, William Rooke	600
Immigrant composers	600
William Viner, J. S. Cousser, Matthew Dubourg, John Smith, Tomasso Giordani, Paul Alday, Johann Logier	600
Visiting composers	601
G. F. Handel, Thomas Arne	601
Francesco Geminiani, Pietro Castrucci, Niccolo Pasquali, Johann Lampe, Jonathan Blewitt	602
Traditional music	603
The Belfast harp festival of 1792; Bunting; harp societies	603
Arrangement and publication of Irish traditional music; Moore's Melodies (1807/8)	605
Effects of the union	606
Military bands	607
Separation of concert from theatre audiences	607
Annual Handel commemoration	607
Catholic oratorio	608
New musical societies	608
Brass and reed bands	609
Musical education	611
The musical celebrity	611
Instrument makers	612
The Dublin Grand Musical Festival, 1831	612
Opera in Dublin	614
Music in the provincial towns	614

Appendix I Societies and charitable bodies connected with music in Dublin before 1850	620
Appendix II Summary of the more important musical items performed in Dublin during the 1749–50 season	622
Appendix III Summary of music at Smock Alley and Aungier Street in the seasons 1748–9 and 1749–50	624
Appendix IV A typical programme of the Philharmonic Society (12 October 1749)	626
Appendix V The chief theatres and concert halls in Dublin before 1850	627
Appendix VI The Dublin music trade, 1650–1850	628
XIX THE IRISH ON THE CONTINENT, 1691–1800
	by J. G. Simms
Increasing migration to Europe	629
Origins of the Irish brigade in French service	630
The Jacobite court as a focus for migration	631
The Irish in French service	632
War of the Spanish succession	632
War of the Austrian succession: Fontenoy	634
The 'Forty-five'	635
The seven years war and after	637
Irishmen in Spanish service	638
Irishmen in Austrian service	640
Maritime action	643
Irish colleges abroad	644
The Irish language in the colleges	644
Scholars and nuns on the Continent	645
Irish merchants abroad	647
Nantes; Bordeaux	647
Spain; Italy	648
Irish doctors and savants on the Continent	649
Impact of the French revolution: the plight of the Irish colleges and clerics	650
Abolition of the Irish brigade	653
Irish sympathisers with the revolution: the United Irishmen	654
XX IRELAND IN 1800
	by R. B. McDowell
Population	657
Emigration	657
Economic situation	660
Agricultural improvement	661
Defects of the agrarian system	662
Industrial problems	664
Communications: canals and roads	664
Coal and iron	665
Irish towns	666
Dublin	669

Contents

xxi

The social pyramid	670
The poorer classes	671
Absence of poor law; other forms of relief	676
The middle classes	678
The upper classes	679
Irish emphasis on gentility	683
Religion	685
Education	689
Intellectual life	692
Administration	695
The lord lieutenant	695
The chief secretary	696
Military departments	697
Revenue and accounting departments	698
The linen board and the directors of inland navigation	701
The civil service	703
Public finance	703
Local government	704
The law courts	705
The justices of the peace	709
Police	709
Prisons	710
 BIBLIOGRAPHY	 by David Dickson 713
 INDEX	 797