

Contents

	page
Gábor Hunya et al. Central and eastern Europe: uneven recovery	3-55
Helen Boss and Peter Havlik Russia, Ukraine and Belarus: output slump and trade breakdown set the stage for policy changes	55-76
 Introductory Remarks	 1
 Gábor Hunya Central and eastern Europe: uneven recovery	 3
1. Accelerating GDP growth in 1994	3
1.1 Production by economic sectors: shift to services	4
1.1.1 Industrial and construction output: lessons from recovery	4
1.1.2 Agriculture: output responds to changes in relative prices	9
1.1.3 Services benefit from structural shifts	11
1.2 Domestic GDP utilization	12
1.2.1 Fixed capital investments: no recovery in 1993	12
1.2.2 Private consumption: retail sales recover in the CEE5	14
1.2.3 Government budget: small contribution to demand	16
1.3 Features of domestic economy	18
1.3.1 Employment adjustments continue	18
1.3.2 Inflation: falling but stubborn	20
1.4 Foreign trade and payments	22
1.4.1 Foreign trade: growing deficits	22
1.4.2 Other foreign positions: generally sound	26
2. Economic policy dilemmas in 1993	30
2.1 The Czech Republic	30
2.2 Hungary	31
2.3 Poland	32
2.4 Slovakia	34
2.5 Romania	35
2.6 Croatia	36

	page
3. Outlook for 1994	37
3.1 The Czech Republic	37
3.2 Hungary	38
3.3 Poland	39
3.4 Slovakia	40
3.5 Slovenia	41
3.6 Bulgaria	41
3.7 Romania	43
4. Summary, conclusions and prospects	43
Appendix	45

Helen Boss and Peter Havlik

Russia, Ukraine and Belarus: output slump and trade breakdown set the stage for policy changes	55
1. Introduction	55
2. Overview of economic developments in the three Slavic CIS republics ...	56
2.1 Russia: output continues to fall and inflation remains stubborn in 1993	56
2.2 Ukraine: output collapse, hyperinflation and fear of stabilization	60
2.3 Belarus: disoriented by the breakup of the Union	63
3. CIS bodies fail to resolve interstate financial issues; interstate trade continues to shrink	66
3.1 The interstate financial impasse	66
3.2 The ongoing collapse of interstate trade	67
4. The CIS republics' prospects in 1994: further separation and continuing declines in trade or a 're-gathering' of former Russian lands?	71