

Teaching Jewish American Literature

Edited by

Roberta Rosenberg

and

Rachel Rubinstein

The Modern Language Association of America

New York

2020

Contents

Introduction	1
Roberta Rosenberg and Rachel Rubinstein
Part I: Reframing Jewish American Histories, Rethinking Canons
Using Early Jewish American Literature to Teach about Race	23
Laura Arnold Leibman
Expanding the Jewish American Literary Canon for Hebrew Day School Students	37
Louis Gordon
Teaching Jewish American Literature with an Anthology	45
Kathryn Hellerstein
Dismantling Christian Readings of Jewish American Literature in the Christian College: A. M. Klein's The Second Scroll	58
Lucas Wilson
The Sense of Bashert : Contingency in Dara Horn's The World to Come and Nicole Krauss's History of Love	63
Lori Hope Lefkowitz
Part II: Comparative Teaching Approaches
Jewish American Literature and the Multicultural Canon	73
Dean Franco
Team-Teaching Jewish and Caribbean Immigration Literature to Diverse Students in a State University	82
Meri-Jane Rochelson and Donna Aza Weir-Soley
Teaching Black-Jewish Literary Relations in Transnational Perspective	90
Sarah Phillips Casteel

Teaching Jewish American Children's and Young Adult Literature Jodi Eichler-Levine	99
Teaching with Things: The Clutter of Russian Jewish American Literature Sasha Senderovich	108
Teaching a Jewish and Arab American Literary Collaboration in Iraq Nadia Fayidh Mohammed	115
 Part III: Multilingual and Transnational Approaches
Unsettling the Linguistic and Geographical Borders of Jewish American Literature: Régine Robin's La Québécoise Justin Cammy	127
Jews beyond America: The One and the Many Ilan Stavans	137
American Poetry, Jewish Prayer, World Literature Naomi B. Sokoloff	144
Beyond English: Language, Sound, and Voice in Jewish American Literature Hana Wirth-Nesher	153
Postvernacular Ladino: Chameleon Languages and Translation Studies Joanna Meadvin and Katharine G. Trostel	163
Sephardic Writing of the United States in a Comparative, Trans-American, and Transatlantic Frame Dalia Kandiyoti	172
 Part IV: Gender and Sexuality Approaches
Writing New Kinds of Jews: A Course in Literary Genetics and Masculinity Yaron Peleg	183
Gender, Genre, and Lesbian Identity in Four Modernist Jewish Texts Corinne E. Blackmer	190

Teaching Jewish American Women's Writing Judith Lewin	198
Poetic Pedagogies: Teaching Irena Klepfisz in Israel/Palestine Zohar Weiman-Kelman	208
Jews, Gender, and Comix Peter Antelyes	216
Teaching Angels in America in the Twenty-First Century: Memory, Mourning, and Meaning Linda Schlossberg	231

Part V: Multidisciplinary and Digital Humanities Approaches

Musical Theater as Literature: Art and Identity That Thrive on Change Judah M. Cohen	241
Serious Fun: Teaching Jewish American Humor Jennifer Caplan	251
Digital Jews: Questioning Borders in Jewish American Literature Laini Kavaloski	258
After the Golem: Teaching Golems, Kabbalah, Exile, Imagination, and Technological Takeover Temma Berg	267
Teaching Contemporary Jewish American Holocaust Literature: Memory, "Fatigue," and Narratives of Post-Holocaust Return Jennifer Lemberg	276

Part VI: New Approaches and Key Texts

The Surprising Versatility of Israel Zangwill's The Melting Pot Karen E. H. Skinazi and Lori Harrison-Kahan	287
Teaching Abraham Cahan's Yekl as a Comedy of Arrival and Dislocation John Wharton Lowe	296

Displacement and Identity in the Work of Anzia Yeziarska and Helena Maria Viramontes Judith R. Phagan	304
Teaching Anzia Yeziarska's Bread Givers in Australia Sarah Gleeson-White and Lucas Thompson	308
Anzia Yeziarska and the Changing Fortunes of Jewishness Catherine Rottenberg	312
Four Approaches to Teaching "Goodbye, Columbus" Josh Lambert, Rachel Gordan, Benjamin Schreier, Bettina Hofmann, and Julian Levinson	317
 Part VII: Resources
Resources Roberta Rosenberg and Rachel Rubinstein	329
Notes on Contributors	341