

Contents

Foreword	vii
1 Introduction:
Comparisons and the Triple Approach to Well-Being	1
1.1 Economic Growth, Consumption, and Quality of Life in Comparative Research	4
1.2 The Aims and Scope of Research	16
1.3 Methods and Sources	17
1.4 The Structure of the Volume	21
2 Economic Growth:
Catching Up and Falling Behind	23
2.1 Measuring Economic Output	24
2.2 Trends and Stages of Growth in Western Europe	41
2.3 Trajectories of Growth in East Central Europe	66
3 Consumption:
Structures, Practices, and Policies	89
3.1 Changing Consumption Patterns in Western Europe	91
3.2 Consumption in Communist East Central Europe	147

4 Quality of Life:
Towards a More Comprehensive Understanding of Well-Being	203
4.1 Conceptual and Methodological Issues	203
4.2 Trajectories of Well-Being in Western Europe	207
4.3 The Quality of Life in East Central Europe	222
5 Determinants of Change:
Accounting for Growth and Beyond	227
5.1 Factors of Economic Growth	227
5.2 Determinants of the Quality of Life	238
5.3 Causes of Convergence and Divergence	242
6 Passages to the New Millennium:
The Evolving Order of Divisions	253
6.1 Economic Growth in Western Europe at the Turn of the Millennium: Changes in the Quality of Life	254
6.2 East Central Europe after the Regime Change: Economic Transformation, Consumer Aspirations, and the Pursuit of Well-Being	267
7 Conclusions:
Lessons of the Triple Approach	289
 Appendix	 301
Notes	319
Bibliography	377
Index	431