

Table of Contents

Introduction	13
Part I
Theoretical and Methodological Considerations	23
I.1 Indigenous Voices and Reflections about One's Own Scholarly Position	25
I. 1.1 The beginning of my interest in Canadian art history	25
I. 1.2 The notion of position	25
I. 1.3 Positive encounters and contested grounds: self-representation and the rejection of cultural anthropological research as it was	27
I. 1.4 The conflict in open words	30
I. 1.5 Ethics in research	33
I. 1.6 Is art a solution to this conflict?	34
I. 1.7 Art practice as a field of dialogue	36
I. 1.8 The functions of art on a symbolic level	39
I. 1.9 The art discourse as a field of dialogue	40
I. 1.10 Feminist art history, post-colonial art history, Indigenous art history	42
I. 1.11 German discourses on post-colonial art history and Canadian Indigenous art history	45
I. 1.12 A cultural studies approach to the Canadian art discourse	46
I. 1.13 Methodologies	48
I.2 Ethics in Museum Anthropology and the Practice of Indigenous Art	51
I. 2.1 Debates on ethics and responsible ethnology in the early 1990s in Germany: museum anthropologist Volker Harms' essay on participation of those concerned (1993)	51
I. 2.2 Origin history of an exemplary museum: The UBC Museum of Anthropology , Vancouver, B.C.	56
I. 2.3 Conclusion: ethics, participation, reciprocal responsibilities, and (Indigenous) art	61
I.3 Canada as Research Context	63
I. 3.1 The Local, the Global, and the National. Source disciplines and the research frame ("Canadian art discourse")	63
I. 3.2 What distinguishes Canada as a research context in cultural and Indigenous studies ?	75

I.4 Art World/ Art Discourse	101
I. 4.1 Influential theoretical concepts of art world and art discourse in sociology and philosophy	101
I. 4.2 Discourse as perceived through art practice and art history	102
I. 4.3 Curatorial practice as narrative discourse and a form of negotiation in the art system – feminist and cultural critical concepts	104
I. 4.4 The examination of national and international art world practices in cultural anthropology	106
I. 4.5 The term art discourse in cultural anthropological texts	108
I. 4.6 The term art discourse in the texts of Canadian Aboriginal authors	108
I. 4.7 Continuing and changing discourses and practices or: the relationship between art discourse and the institutions and practices of the art system	111

Part II

The Canadian Art World, the Canadian Art Discourse, and Aboriginal Perspectives 113

II.1 The Geography of the Canadian Art World: Art Centers in Canada 117

II. 1.1 Introduction	117
II. 1.2 Decentralization and democratization as key terms of Canadian art politics of the 1970s	119
II. 1.3 Characteristics of art centers	120

II.2 Specific Features and Characteristics of the Late 20th Century Canadian Art World 143

II. 2.1 Culture politics, museum politics and mandates (1960s to early 2000s)	143
II. 2.2 Exhibiting institutions in the Canadian art system	153
II. 2.3 Collecting and the art market in Canada	159
II. 2.4 Artists Organizations and Artists Groups (19th century to early 2000s)	164
II. 2.5 The post-secondary art education in Canada (art schools and universities)	168
II. 2.6 Art Funding	175
II. 2.7 Art and law (late 20th century)	180

II.3 Communication about Art in Canada and Canadian Art Historiography 183

II. 3.1 Art History Departments	183
II. 3.2 Art literature and publishing	189
II. 3.3 Art magazines, daily press, television, and film	192
II. 3.4 Art Critique	198
II. 3.5 Art historiography: the art historical narrative and Aboriginal art in Canada	200
II. 3.6 Curatorial Practice	243

Part III
Case Studies	261

III. 1 Doreen Jensen's Curatorial Essay "Metamorphosis" for the Exhibition Topographies. Aspects of Recent B.C. Art at the Vancouver Art Gallery, 1996	262
---	------------

III. 1.1 Introduction	262
III. 1.2 Doreen Jensen's curatorial essay " Metamorphosis ": story and theory	264
III. 1.3 Narrative strategies 1: metamorphosis, transformation, change, and the will to change – Doreen Jensen's definition of artistic practice	265
III. 1.4 Narrative strategies 2: intertwining history, cultural politics, and art – the course of the essay	269
III. 1.5 Narrative strategies 3: artists, artists statements, and the agency of art	272
III. 1.6 Conclusion: a reflection on change as a category in art and history	274

III. 2 The Long Term Exhibition Art of this Land in the National Gallery of Canada (2003 - 2011): A New Interpretation of Canadian (Art) History	277
---	------------

III. 2.1 Introduction	277
III. 2.2 The National Gallery of Canada : building and history	278
III. 2.3 Art of this Land : curatorial decisions	280
III. 2.4 What can be communicated through a changing art historical narrative?	290
III. 2.5 Ways of changing the art historical narrative: art history as written by artists, history as made by artists	292
III. 2.6 A re-evaluation of the hierarchies between art and craft/ own and other	295
III. 2.7 Conclusion	299

III. 3 The Notion of Appropriation (and Its Context) as Employed by Aboriginal Authors in the US American and Canadian Discourse on Art and Art History	301
--	------------

III. 3.1 Introduction	301
III. 3.2 Loretta Todd: "Notes on Appropriation" (1994)	302
III. 3.3 The accusations of appropriation and the artwork of Lothar Baumgarten	305
III. 3.4 Partial conclusion and further questions	312
III. 3.5 Appropriation, Modern Art Practices, National Identities and Reciprocity	314
III. 3.6 Appendix: Appropriation, métissage, the colonial system and "trickster-ish" action as a means of de-colonization	319

III.4 Appropriation, De-colonization Processes in the Art World, and the Importance of “Indigenous Voice”: Debates of the 1980s and James Clifford as a Critic Between History, Anthropology, and the Art Discourse	323
III. 4.1 James Clifford as an observer of anthropology
III. 4.3 Primitivism in 20th Century Art: Affinities of the Tribal and the Modern (1984) and James Clifford’s critique in Art in America (1985)	326
III. 4.4 Understanding decolonization-processes and the importance of Indigenous voice for art world developments	331
III. 4.5 Clifford’s look at Indigenous museums and cooperative research projects	336
III. 4.6 Conclusion	340
III. 5 The Northwest Coast Renaissance of Indigenous Art and Culture and the Writing of Canadian Art History	343
III. 5.1 Introduction	343
III. 5.2 Two controversial interpretations of the notion of renaissance (Joan Vastokas 1975, Martine Reid 1988)	344
III. 5.3 Historical background for the narrative of a “Northwest Coast Renaissance”	347
III. 5.4 Bill Reid and his role in Canadian Art History	352
III. 5.5 “On that world stage”: Bill Reid, his role in international art history and in Canadian national history	359
III. 5.6 Marcia Crosby on Bill Reid and the political contexts of Indigenous communities	362
III. 5.7 Conclusion	365
III. 6 Did Indigenism Travel Alongside Muralism From Mexico to Canada? Art Historical Relations between Mexico, the US and Canada in 20th Century Art	367
III. 6.1 Introduction	367
III. 6.2 Three moments of art discourse: North American art stars, Expo ’67, and the admiration for Mexican Muralism in 20th century Canadian art discourse	368
III. 6.3 Background 1: Mexican Muralism in the context of Indigenism	371
III. 6.4 Background 2: muralism in the US	373
III. 6.5 Background 3: US American Abstract Art between politics and Indigenous inspiration	374
III. 6.6 Background 4: mural traditions in Canada	375
III. 6.7 Observing the Canadian art discourse of the late 1940s and early 1950s: reports on murals and hints to Mexico	376
III. 6.8 Observing the Canadian art discourse of the 1950s: Essays on modern architecture and abstract murals	378
III. 6.9 Towards Expo ’67 in Montréal	382
III. 6.10 Murals on the outside of the Indians of Canada Pavilion at Expo ’67	383
III. 6.11 Conclusion	385

III. 7 Art As Voice and the Voice of Art-Related Writing. Rebecca Belmore and the Reception of Her Early Artistic Work by Indigenous and Non-Indigenous Authors (1987 - 2008)	389
III. 7.1 Early recognition as contemporary Native artist from Northwestern Ontario (1988 - 1991)	392
III. 7.2 Early recognition as performance artist (1987-1991)	397
III. 7.3 The Oka-Crisis (1990) as backdrop for Rebecca Belmore's "Ayum-ee- aawach-Oomama-mowan: Speaking to Their Mother" (1991, 1992, 1996)	401
III. 7.4 The year 1992 as the context for Belmore's early success on a national scale	404
III. 7.5 Rebecca Belmore's work as subject of Canadian art discourse after 1992	407
III. 7.6 Indigenous Art History	414
III. 7.7 International art critique	420
III. 7.8 Appreciation of innovative artistic language and of political cause in national and international contexts	421
III. 7.9 Exhibitions at central Canadian museums and galleries in the early 2000s	426
III. 7.10 International messages of de-colonization: Rebecca Belmore's participation at the Venice Biennale 2005	429
III. 7.11 Conclusion	432
Conclusion and Final Thoughts	435
Bibliography	459
Figures	483
Acknowledgements	485