Contents

Acknowledgments vii

1. Expectations 1
   - Between a remembered past and an imagined future 5
   - Embrace, balance, resist 9
   - Changing times, changing families 14
   - Parenting in the risk society 17
   - Overview of this book 23
2. Family Life in the Digital Age 29
   - Greeting the day 29
   - Digital technologies in the "democratic family" 31
   - As the day unfolds 34
   - Negotiating values 38
   - The trouble with screen time 42
   - Keeping the digital in perspective 47
   - At the end of the day 51
   - Conclusions 53
3. Social Inequality 59
   - Below the poverty line 64
   - Elite families, elite skills 68
   - Living creatively 71
   - Making privilege count 76
   - Conclusions 81
4. Geek Identities in the Digital Family 88
   - The contemporary fascination with geeks 90
   - Geek practices as learning 93
   - How parents make sense of "geeking out" 98
   - The case of parent bloggers 101
   - Inequalities in geek culture 106
   - Conclusions 112
5. (Dis)abilities 117
   - Defining disability 119
   - Disabilities and technology 122
   - Connected present, uncertain future 127

Intersecting Identities 132
Dilemmas of voice and support 136
Conclusions 141

6. Parents and Digital Learning 145
Anticipating the role of parents 148
Bluebell—inclusive efforts 152
DigiCamp—the leading edge 156
London Youth Arts—creative reshaping 161
Connecting learning—where parents fit in? 166
Conclusions 169

7. Imagining the Future 171
Looking back, to look forward 171
Future talk 173
Future consequences 178
Why is the digital so salient? 182
What difference does the digital make? 185
Listening to parents—what did we learn? 189
Final words 194

Appendix: Research Methods 197
References 221
Index 251