

Table of contents

List of figures	11
List of tables	12
Foreword
Franz Waldenberger	13
Ilse Lenz	14
Acknowledgements	17
Introduction: Studying Japan	19
Nora Kottmann and Cornelia Reiher
Chapter 1 How to begin research: The diversity of Japanese Studies	29
Roger Goodman
1.1 Positioning one's own research in Japanese Studies: Between Area Studies and discipline	40
Verena Blechinger-Talcott
1.2 Let the field be your guide	43
Daniel P. Aldrich
1.3 Studying marriage in Japan: A social anthropological approach	47
Joy Hendry
Further reading	51
References	51
Chapter 2 How to ask: Research questions	53
Gabriele Vogt
2.1 Your research questions may change and that is ok	65
Nicolas Sternsdorff-Cisterna
2.2 Studying Japanese political behaviour and institutions	68
Kenneth Mori McElwain
2.3 Capturing social change in Japan	72
David Chiavacci
Further reading	76
References	76
Chapter 3 How to organise research: Research designs	78
Kaori Okano
3.1 Developing a comparative study: Single women in Hong Kong, Tokyo and Shanghai	88
Lynne Y. Nakano

3.2	Contained serendipity as fieldwork in Japan: Studying Chinese people in Japan ... Jamie Coates	91
3.3	The universe of cases: Agricultural cooperatives in Japan as a case study Kay Shimizu	95
	Further reading	99
	References	99
Chapter 4	How to identify relevant scholarly debates: Reviewing the literature Urs Matthias Zachmann	102
4.1	Looking for sources in all the right places	117
	Patricia L. Maclachlan
4.2	Ambiguity and blurred boundaries: Contextualising and evaluating heterogeneous sources	121
	Sonja Ganseforth
4.3	Doing migration research in Japan: The roles of scholarly literature	125
	Gracia Liu-Farrer
	Further reading	130
	References	130
Chapter 5	How to collect data: An introduction to qualitative Social Science methods	132
	Akiko Yoshida
5.1	Participant observation and interviews: Going with the flow and dipping in and out	142
	Emma E. Cook
5.2	Transnational research in Japan Studies—an oxymoron? Studying cross-border labour mobility in globalising Japanese production organisations	146
	Karen Shire
5.3	‘Bullseye view on happiness’: A qualitative interview survey method	151
	Barbara Holthus and Wolfram Manzenreiter
	Further reading	155
	References	155
Chapter 6	How to do fieldwork: Studying Japan in and outside of Japan	157
	Levi McLaughlin
6.1	The cosmology of fieldwork: Relationship building, theoretical engagement and knowledge production in Japan Anthropology	169
	Nana Okura Gagné

6.2	A mobilities approach to 'Japan' fieldwork	173
	James Farrer
6.3	Building arguments on national policies from everyday observations	177
	Hanno Jentszsch
	Further reading	181
	References	181
Chapter 7	How to interview people: Qualitative interviews	184
	Nora Kottmann and Cornelia Reiher
7.1	The empire of interviews: Asking my way through Japan	196
	Christoph Brumann
7.2	The art of interviewing: A Japanese perspective	200
	Tomiko Yamaguchi
7.3	Talking through difficult topics	204
	Allison Alexy
	Further reading	208
	References	208
Chapter 8	How to observe people and their environment: Participant observation	211
	Christian Tagsold and Katrin Ullmann
8.1	Of serendipities, success and failure and insider/outsider status in participant observation	223
	Susanne Klien
8.2	Doing and writing affective ethnography	227
	Akiko Takeyama
8.3	Reflections on fieldwork in post-bubble Japan: Gender, work and urban space	231
	Swee-Lin Ho
	Further reading	235
	References	235
Chapter 9	How to access written and visual sources: Archives, libraries and databases	238
	Theresia Berenike Peucker, Katja Schmidt-pott and Cosima Wagner
9.1	Clever approaches to tricky sources: How to extract information from business archives and war memorials	248
	Katja Schmidt-pott and Tino Schölz
9.2	Writing transnational history through archival sources	252
	Sheldon Garon

9.3	Accessing quantitative data for qualitative research: White Papers, official statistics and micro datasets	256
	Shinichi Aizawa and Daisuke Watanabe
	Further reading	261
	References	261
Chapter 10	How to combine methods: Mixed methods designs	264
	Carola Hommerich and Nora Kottmann
10.1	Reflections on multi-method research	283
	Robert J. Pekkanen and Saadia M. Pekkanen
10.2	Texts, voices and numbers: Using mixed methods to sketch social phenomena	287
	Laura Dales
10.3	Examining facts from different angles: The case of the deregulation of employment relations in Japan	292
	Jun Imai
	Further reading	297
	References	297
Chapter 11	How to analyse data: An introduction to methods of data analysis in qualitative Social Science research	300
	David Chiavacci
11.1	Negotiating the ethics of gathering research data in a subcultural context	310
	Katharina Hülsmann
11.2	Researching sex and the sexuality of Japanese teenagers: The intricacies of condom use	313
	Genaro Castro-Vázquez
11.3	Studying economic discourse	317
	Markus Heckel
	Further reading	321
	References	321
Chapter 12	How to make sense of data: Coding and theorising	323
	Caitlin Meagher
12.1	Cresting the wave of data	335
	Nancy Rosenberger
12.2	Lost in translation? Grounded theory and developing theoretical concepts	339
	Celia Spoden
12.3	Coding: Mapping the mountains of ethnographic post-disaster data	343
	Julia Gerster

Further reading	347
References	347
Chapter 13 How to systematise texts: Qualitative content and frame analysis	349
Celeste L. Arrington
13.1 Qualitative content analysis: A systematic way of handling qualitative data and its challenges	363
Anna Wiemann
13.2 Analysis of biographical interviews in a transcultural research process	367
Emi Kinoshita
13.3 Qualitative content analysis and the study of Japan's foreign policy	371
Kai Schulze
Further reading	375
References	375
Chapter 14 How to understand discourse: Qualitative discourse analysis	377
Andreas Eder-Ramsauer and Cornelia Reiher
14.1 Media buzzwords as a source of discourse analysis: The discourse on Japan's herbivore men	389
Annette Schad-Seifert
14.2 Analysing affect, emotion and feelings in fieldwork on Japan	393
Daniel White
14.3 From buzzwords to discourse to Japanese politics	397
Steffen Heinrich
Further reading	402
References	402
Chapter 15 How to finish: Writing in a stressful world	405
Chris McMorran
15.1 Training your 'writing muscle': Writing constantly and theoretically	414
Aya H. Kimura
15.2 Writing stories	418
Christian Tagsold
15.3 Writing about Japan	422
Richard J. Samuels
Further reading	426
References	426

Chapter 16 How to conduct reliable and fair research: Good research practice	428
Cornelia Reiher and Cosima Wagner
16.1 Fairness in research and publishing: The balancing act of cultural translation	442
Isaac Gagné
16.2 Digital oral narrative research in Japan: An engaged approach	446
David H. Slater, Robin O'Day, Flavia Fulco and Noor Albazerbashi
16.3 Writing for publication: Eight helpful hints	450
Christopher Gerteis
Further reading	452
References	452
Chapter 17 How to present findings: Presenting and publishing	455
James Farrer and Gracia Liu-Farrer
17.1 Finding an audience: Presenting and publishing in Japanese Studies	466
Scott North
17.2 Ethnographic film and fieldwork on active ageing in rural Japan	470
Isabelle Prochaska-Meyer
17.3 Weird and wonderful: Popularising your research on Japan	474
Brigitte Steger
Further reading	478
References	478
Notes on contributors	480
Index	493