Contents

Foreword, BARBARA ABRAMS, MIRA MORGENSTERN, and KAREN SULLIVAN xiii

Acknowledgments xv

Abbreviations xvii

Introduction, MIRA MORGENSTERN 1

Chapter 1: Rousseau and the Hebrew Bible: reading the Hebrew Bible in the eighteenth century, MIRA MORGENSTERN 5

- Introduction: the conventional argument 5
- Social contract theorists and the Hebrew Bible 8
- Autonomy in the Hebrew Bible and its political implications for social contract theorists 11
- Moral autonomy in the Hebrew Bible and the evaluation of politics 14
- Rousseau and reading the Hebrew Bible 16
- Rousseau and images of power 20
- Rousseau and biblical tonalities 24

Brief summary of Rousseau's Lévite d'Ephraïm, BARBARA ABRAMS, MIRA MORGENSTERN, and KAREN SULLIVAN 31

Chapter 2: Crime and self-punishment: trauma, reading, and representation in Rousseau's Lévite d'Ephraïm, KAREN SULLIVAN 35

Introduction 35

Rousseau in June 1762 41

Similarities and differences between Judges 19–21 and Rousseau's Lévite d'Ephraïm 44

Reconstructing the self through representation: Rousseau's guilt and remorse 53

Return to the scene of the crime: abjection and language 63

The Levite's story: exciting passions and muddying the waters 69

Representation and violence 73

Abjection and the power of the visual 74

"Persuading without convincing": abjection, the wise legislator, and the artist 77

Judgment: of action or intention? 81

Action (physical) and intention (moral) 81

Conclusion: avoiding abjection—June 1762 85

Abjection, trauma, and scapegoating today 88

Chapter 3: Decoding hospitality: image and polity in Rousseau's Lévite d'Ephraïm, BARBARA ABRAMS 91

First canto 104

Second canto 114

Third canto 121

Fourth canto 123

Conclusion 124

Chapter 4: Strangeness, violence, and the establishment of nationhood in Rousseau, MIRA MORGENSTERN 127

Introduction: the political argument of the story 127

Rousseau reads the Hebrew Bible 130

Biblical narrative: destructive founding 132
Circles of strangeness 140
Rousseau and the stranger 143
Conclusion 153

Afterword: hospitality as an Enlightenment project, MIRA MORGENSTERN 159
Introduction 159
The political consequences of hospitality 160
Modern considerations of hospitality 163
Complications of hospitality 166
The future of hospitality 170

Appendix 1: Juges 19–21 (Lemaistre de Sacy translation) 173
Appendix 2: Juges 19–21 (Ostervald translation) 183
Appendix 3: Rousseau's Le Lévite d'Ephraïm (French) 195
Appendix 4: Rousseau's The Levite of Ephraïm (English, Scott translation) 209
Bibliography 227
Index 237