PART I THEORY AND MODEL IN SOCIOLOGY Formal Framework for Theory Construction

Chapter 1	THEORETICAL IDEAL IN MODERN SOCIOLOGY	3
Chapter 2	THE NOTION OF A THEORY	6
	Theoretical Function	7
	Theoretical Structure	14
Chapter 3	THE NOTION OF A CONCEPTUAL MODEL	24
	The Functions of a Conceptual Model	26
	The Structure of a Conceptual Model	31

PART II SYSTEMIC-FUNCTIONAL MODELS
Substantial Continuities in Sociological Theory
Chapter 4	FUNCTIONALISM IN SOCIOLOGY AND SOCIAL ANTHROPOLOGY	35
	Functionalist Theory	37
	Functionalist Terminological Scheme	40
	Functionalist Method	40
Chapter 5	SYSTEMIC MODELS IN FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS	47
	Organic Analogy	48
	System as Generalized Notion	52
	Functional Analysis and Systems Approach	56
Chapter 6	SIMPLE FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS	58
	The Model of a Simple System	58
	Reciprocity versus Exploitation	63
	Consensus versus Conflict	65
	Dependence versus Autonomy	67
	Isolation versus Structural Context	69
	The Conceptual Framework of Simple Functional Analysis	71
Chapter 7	DIRECTIVE FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS	73
	The Model of a Teleological System	73
	Universal Functionality versus Specific Functionality	82
	Uniform Functionality versus Diverse Functionality	85
	Equipotent Functionality versus Differential Functionality	87
	Functional Indispensibility versus Structural Alternatives	88
	Equilibrium versus Disequilibrium	92
	The Conceptual Framework of Directive Functional Analysis	96
Chapter 8	FUNCTIONAL-REQUISITE ANALYSIS	97
	The Model of a Functional System	97
	Monofunctionality versus Multifunctionality	105
	Commensurate Requirements versus Contradictory Requirements	107
	Constant Requirements versus Changing Requirements	109
	The Conceptual Framework of Functional-Requisite Analysis	110

Chapter 9	FUNCTIONAL-MOTIVATIONAL ANALYSIS	112
	The Model of a Purposeful System	112
	Sociocentric versus Egocentric Images of Man	116
	Intended versus Unintended Functions	117
	Manifest versus Latent Functions	120
	The Conceptual Framework of Functional-Motivational Analysis	122
Chapter 10	FUNCTIONAL-SUBSYSTEMIC ANALYSIS	124
	The Model of a Multiple System	124
	Functional Unity versus Functional Disunity	128
	Subsystemic Integration versus Subsystemic Disintegration	130
	The Conceptual Framework of Functional-Subsystemic Analysis	131
PART III	THE GENERALIZED SYSTEMIC-FUNCTIONAL MODEL
	Three Charges Refuted
Chapter 11	THE PROBLEM OF EMPIRICAL ADEQUACY	135
Chapter 12	THE CHARGE OF TELEOLOGICAL BIAS	138
	Explication of the Charge	138
	The Evolutionary Mechanism	143
	The Rational Mechanism	146
	The Normative Mechanism	148
	The Structural Mechanism	150
Chapter 13	THE CHARGE OF STATIC BIAS	153
	Explication of the Charge	153
	Refutation of the Charge	155
Chapter 14	THE CHARGE OF AHISTORIC BIAS	162
	Explication of the Charge	162
	Refutation of the Charge	164
Chapter 15	SYSTEMIC-FUNCTIONAL MODELS IN THE MARXIST THEORY OF SOCIETY	168
	Introduction	168
	The Assumption of Plurality	171

The Assumptions of Wholeness and of Integration	171
The Assumption of Boundary	172
The Assumption of Directive Organization	172
The Assumption of Self-Regulation	173
The Assumption of Double-Level Directive Organization	174
The Assumption of Double-Level Self-Regulation	174
The Assumptions of Purposeful Rationality and of the Integration of Systemic Goals with Individual Purposes	175
The Assumptions of Plurality and the Heterogeneity of Subsystems	176
The Assumption of Boundary Interchange	176
Conclusion	177

Chapter 16 CONCLUSION	179
