

Contents

	Introduction	1
1	Dance Like It's 1919: Hannah Höch's Not So Liberated Dancers of the Early Weimar Republic	17
2	There's Something About Mary (Wigman): Expressionist Art, Women's Magazines, and the Woman Dancer as Subject	50
3	Kicklines for Feminists: Women's Pleasures in the Weimar Revue	90
4	The Weimar Vogue for Black Dance: Josephine Baker and the Colonial Imaginary	133
5	It Takes Two to Shimmy: Gender and Race in Otto Dix's World of Social Dancing	167
6	Designed to Dance: Gender and the Gesamttanzwerk at the Bauhaus	202
	Conclusion: Marking (Modern) Movement in the Third Reich	233
	Notes	255
	Bibliography	301
	Index	319