

CONTENTS

Preface to Second Edition iii

Acknowledgements iii

Introduction vii

Part I THE PROBLEM AND ITS SETTING

1	LABOUR MIGRANCY AND THE PROCESS OF URBANIZATION 'Men of two worlds'—The Xhosa-speaking people and the Red-School division—The meaning of 'urbanization'—Rootedness and culture—Fields of behaviour for investigation: (a) criteria for town-rootedness; (b) criteria for cultural urbanization; (c) the diachronic aspect—The agents of change—Formation of ties in town—Choice in regard to institutions—The aspiring and the satisfied—Conclusion	1
2	THE RURAL BACKGROUND: RED AND SCHOOL XHOSA The extent of Red-School division—Some cultural differentia: (a) dress and externals; (b) schooling; (c) Christianity—Red, School and the White man—Mutual criticisms and their basis—Conclusion	20
3	'THE PLACE OF WHITE MEN': THE EAST LONDON SETTING The Xhosa and the towns—The locations—Black and White: the experience of subordination: (a) the distribution of authority; (b) the incidence of regulation—Influx control and migrant life—The migrant's view of influx control—'White men's ways'	42
4	TRIBESMEN AND TOWNSMEN IN THE EAST LONDON LOCATIONS Migrants and immigrants—The Red proportion—Separateness of categories in town—Migrants' stereotypes: the 'immorality' of townspeople—Townsmen's stereotypes: the 'naiveté' of migrants—Inter-relations between the Red, School and urban sections—Red-School aloofness in town—The migrant-townsmen opposition in action: riots of 1952 and 1958—Note on stabilization	68

Part 2 RESISTING URBANIZATION

5	THE INCAPSULATION OF RED MIGRANTS I. HOME TIES AND DOMESTIC LIFE Going to work—The negative picture of East London—The moral nexus between East London and the country: (a) home visiting; (b) discharging kinship roles in absentia— Amakhaya in town—Domestic life—The room-sharing phase—Unequal room-mates—Finding one's own room—The second phase of domestic life: living separately—Neighbourhood clusters	90
6	THE INCAPSULATION OF RED MIGRANTS 2. RECREATIONS AND FRIENDSHIPS Iseti —Age-groups: the corporate life of abafana —Urban associations and recreations—Pagan Christmas—Individual friendships	111
7	THE INCAPSULATION OF RED MIGRANTS 3. THE 'AMAKHAYA' AND SOCIAL CONTROL Some conclusions: the Red migrant and his network—The amakhaya in action—Social control—The nature of the sanctions—The passage of time	124
8	ECONOMIC ATTITUDES OF RED MIGRANTS Red peasant attitudes to money—Obligations to the home economy—Savings and investments—Economic relations within the location—Work attitudes of Red migrants—Economic attitudes and incapsulation	135
9	SPIRITS AND WITCHES [IN COLLABORATION WITH IONA MAYER] The ancestor cult and the rural home—Sacrificing in town—Substitute rituals in town—The guardian spirits, the community and the moral code—The discipline of the spirits—The long arm of witchcraft—The opposing influences of witches and ancestors	150

Part 3 PROCESSES OF URBANIZATION

- 10 FARM SERVANTS: THE ESCAPE TO TOWN 166
The status of workers on farms—The choice of evils—Keeping up the country connexion: (a) remaining oriented to the farm; (b) trying for rural security—Giving up the country connexion—Resistance to total urbanization
- 11 RED MIGRANTS OUTSIDE INCAPSULATION 178
Avoiding the amakhaya—Forming new ties—The refusal of incapsulation from the outset—Drifting away: personal contacts—Intermarriage—Joining the urban riff-raff
- 12 RED CONVERTS TO CHRISTIANITY 192
The churches and the Red people—Bhengu's church—Effects of joining Bhengu's church: (a) habits and values; (b) the social network—Bhengu's church and country-rootedness
- 13 SCHOOL MIGRANTS 206
The School migrant and the town network—Room-mates—School men's wives: town versus country—School marriage morality and the wife's move to town—School marriage in the town setting—Social ties: (a) friendships; (b) churches and clubs; (c) drinking together
- 14 SCHOOL MIGRANTS BETWEEN TOWN AND COUNTRY 224
Double-rootedness—School men and their country homes—Giving up the country home—Urbanization frustrated: the insecurity of town

Part 4 WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN THE MIGRANT SITUATION

- 15 GIRLS AND WOMEN IN TOWN 233
Town and the status of women—Girls and amankazana—Reasons why girls come to town—Reasons why women come to town: (a) widows; (b) unmarried mothers—The tendency to strike roots in town: (a) employment and urbanization; (b) self-employment and urbanization
- 16 SEXUAL PARTNERSHIPS 252
'Immorality' in town—Impregnation of girls in town—Staying together (ukushweshwa)—The decision to stay together—The morality of ukushweshwa—Economics and morals—Ukushweshwa and urbanization—Ukushweshwa and marriage—Visiting lovers
- 17 TOWN CHILDREN AND COUNTRY CHILDREN 270
[IONA MAYER]
Sending children out of town—Attitudes to town-rearing—Kin-rearing and foster-rearing—The 'children of women'—Red fathers and their natural children—Patriarchal and 'matrifocal' tendencies

Part 5 SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

- 18 NETWORK, CULTURE AND CHANGE 283
[IN COLLABORATION WITH IONA MAYER]
Recapitulation: compulsion and choice—The Red limitation of choice—Remaining within the home system—Network, culture and change—Tribal loyalty and the Red network—Conclusion

POSTSCRIPT

- 19 MDANTSANE 1970 294
Move to the 'homelands'—The price of rehousing—Incapsulation and urban ecology—Mixed iseti—The changing significance of clansmen, neighbours and kin—Structural urbanization and legal uncertainties—Ambiguities in the position of women—The erosion of Red confidence—Incorporation in the urban system—Blurring of the Red-School opposition—Red parents and School children—Conclusions