

Contents

Foreword: Desertification Tom Lynch	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: The Dry Time Jada Ach and Gary Reger	1
PART I: ECO-IDENTITIES AND ENVIRONMENTAL BELONGING IN ARID AMERICA	19
1 Imagined Deserts, Planned Communities, and Escape Pods in the American West Amy T. Hamilton	21
2 Aridity, Individualism, and Paradox in Elmer Kelton's The Time It Never Rained Quinn Grover	45
3 Desert Haunting: A Gothic Reading of Arturo Islas' The Rain God Cordelia Barrera	67
4 Imagining the Southwest in Willa Cather's Frontier Novels: Settler Colonialism in The Song of the Lark , The Professor's House , and Death Comes for the Archbishop Zachary R. Hernandez	87

PART II: DESERT REMAINS: ROADS, DAMS, AND DISCARDED PIANOS	115
5 Desert Roads, “Construction Men,” and Infrastructural Impulses in Willa Cather’s The Professor’s House Jada Ach	117
6 “It was the river”: Indigenous Anti-Dam Literature of the Great American Desert Holly Jean Richard and Paul Formisano	141
7 The Desert as Dumping Ground in Popular Imagination Jennifer Dawes	169
PART III: ENVISIONING THE DESERT FROM OUTSIDE THE WEST	193
8 Trinitite, Turquoise, and Rattlesnakes: Envisioning the (De)Nuclearized Desert in the Works of Leslie Marmon Silko and Kyoko Hayashi Kyoko Matsunaga	195
9 Color, Place, and Memory in Silko’s Gardens in the Dunes Celina Osuna	223
10 French Travelers in the Arid Southwest Gary Reger	243
Conclusion: Desert Dwelling Ron Broglio	273
Index	279
About the Contributors	293