

Contents

Acknowledgements	vi
Introduction	1
Revisiting Brecht's Dialectical Theatre	4
Rethinking Dialectics via Adorno and Rancière	12
Towards a Post-Brechtian Theatre	18
1 'In-Yer-Face' Theatre and the Crisis of Dialectics: Mark Ravenhill's Post-Brechtian Drama in Anti-Dialectical Times	29
The Post-Brechtian Parable: Some Explicit Polaroids	31
Resisting the Banal Dialectic of (Counter-)Terrorism: Shoot/Get Treasure/Repeat	41
Conclusion	61
2 Reimagining Brecht: David Greig's Theatre of Dissensus	63
Appropriating the Imagination: Dunsinane	66
Interrupting Empathy: The Events	82
Conclusion	98
3 Strategic Naivety: The Dialectic of Sincerity in Andy Smith and Tim Crouch's Work	101
Post-Brechtian Meta-Theatre: all that is solid melts into air	104
The Limits of Sincerity: The Author	117
Conclusion	129
4 Political Theatre between Dialectics and Absurdity: Caryl Churchill's Twenty-First-Century Plays	131
Dystopian Negativity: Escaped Alone	136
Deconstructing the Dialectic: Here We Go	152
Conclusion	166
Conclusion	167
Bibliography	173
Index	189