Preface vii

I. INTRODUCTION TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS 1

1. The Sociological Study of Social Problems: Perspectives and Definitions 2
Larry T. Reynolds

II. WEALTH AND POWER: TOO CONCENTRATED 9

2. Wall Street Still Rules 11
Victor Perlo
The barons of high finance continue to dictate America's economic, political, and social fate.
3. Estate Capitalists: Top Wealth Holders and the Superrich 18
Jonathan H. Turner and Charles E. Starnes
A mere 3 percent of the adult population of the United States owns over 60 percent of all corporate stocks.
4. Socialism for the Rich 25
Sidney Lens
A very large share of America's welfare payments go not to the poor but to the rich and the very rich.
5. James E. Carter and the Trilateral Commission: A Southern Strategy 33
Mark Allen
The close connection between the new southern political power base and the old eastern economic power base demonstrates again that Wall Street still rules.

III. POVERTY: TOO WIDESPREAD 39

6. Why People Are Poor 41
Hyman Lumer
Conventional explanations of the causes of poverty are examined and found mistaken.

7. Inequality, Poverty, and Taxes 45
Herman P. Miller
 In spite of efforts to eliminate poverty, for the past one-quarter of a century income distribution in the United States has remained unchanged.
8. The Uses of Poverty: The Poor Pay All 55
Herbert J. Gans
 Poverty persists because it serves the interests of the most affluent and powerful members of contemporary American society.
9. The Dual Welfare System 60
A. Dale Tussing
 The dual existence of a regular welfare system and a poor people's welfare system results in security for the nonpoor and massive insecurity for the poverty stricken.

IV. MILITARISM 71

10. Is There a Military-Industrial Complex Which Prevents Peace? 73
Marc Pilisuk and Tom Hayden
 Given the current organization of the American military-industrial combine, the prospects for world peace are fleeting.
11. Pentagon Capitalism 92
Seymour Melman
 The military establishment, headed by the Pentagon, is a major center of power in American society.
12. The Size, Scope, and Cost of the Establishment 98
Adam Yarmolinsky
 As roughly 60 percent of the American military budget goes for material and building supplies purchased from United States businesses, the military has become a most important economic customer.

V. RACISM 109

13. Economic Theories of Racism 111
Michael Reich
 Racism is in the best economic interest of rich whites but not in the best economic interest of poor and other working-class whites.
14. Black Obsolescence in a White America 116
Sidney M. Wilffhelm
 Economic forces are worsening conditions for blacks at the very time when many Americans firmly believe that blacks have made and are continuing to make great progress in all walks of life.

15. The Red Man's Burden 128
Peter Collier
The conditions of reservation life for Indians today are deplorable, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs may be helping to keep them that way.
16. "Honk If You're Fatalistic": Chicanos and the Problem of Anglo Stereotypy 135
Rodney Carlos Kirk
The conditions under which Chicanos exist are varied, and the extent to which they form a cohesive minority group is open to question; the real problem is the Anglo culture.
- VI. SEXISM 151
17. Sexism in America: A Statistical Overview 153
Clarice Stasz Stoll
Sexism and sexist practices are found in every segment of the American social structure.
18. Women in Labor 163
Marijean Suelzle
The large number of "firsts" being recorded by women obscure an overall decline in women's status in the labor force.
19. The Politics of Housework 174
Pat Mainardi
All forms of exploitative work are political in nature, but none is more political than housework.
20. The Class Roots of Feminism 178
Karen Sacks
The women's movement in America has been composed of various sub-movements with differing class roots and interests; however, the enemy in all cases has remained the same.
- VII. POPULATION 189
21. Mill, Malthus, and Growth Without End 194
Robert Lekachman
Population limitation may be essential if people are to lead lives worth living.
22. The Great World Crisis 202
Geoffrey Barraclough
There may be no real overall shortage of foodstuffs, and such food shortages as do appear from time to time may not be the consequence of inexorable population pressures.

23. Growing Global Food Insecurity 209
Lester Brown
 A real overall world food shortage is developing, the direct product of population pressure.

VII. ECOLOGY AND POLLUTION 219

24. Nuclear Pollution and the Arms Race 223
David R. Inglis
 The nuclear and other fuels that go into the world powers' arms race are taken away from efforts to improve the equality of human life at the same time that they pose a horrifying threat to our continued existence.
25. The Selling of the Apocalypse 228
Peter Collier
 The fact that we have truly momentous ecological problems should not cause us to adopt the kind of "doomsday" mentality that can lead us to throw up our hands in defeat and ignore both ecological issues and the fight for human dignity.
26. The Question of Survival 234
Barry Commoner
 If the present degradation of the environment continues unabated, the environment will not be able to sustain a reasonably civilized human society.

IX. ENERGY 241

27. The Energy Crisis Is Coming 244
Richard Parker
 There may be a real energy crisis in store, and it may be unsolvable precisely because current efforts to deal with energy problems do as much harm as they do good.
28. Who Will Own the Sun? 256
Mark Northcross
 Solar energy is cleaner and potentially cheaper, but what if Consumers Power or Consolidated Edison controlled the sun?
29. Running Out of Everything 260
Sidney Lens
 In a so-called market society, shortages cause prices to rise, but if industry can simply declare shortages on numerous items, then it can and will raise prices on all those items.
30. The Price of Power 268
Barry Commoner
 The current energy crisis should not be ignored; it is real, and it reveals that there is a basic fault in the social and economic system, which produced the crisis in the first place.

X. HIGHER EDUCATION 271

31. The Structure of American Education 276

Ted R. Vaughan

American education has adopted the dominant organizational pattern of the larger society-bureaucracy.

32. College and University Trustees: Their Backgrounds, Roles, and Educational Attitudes 279

Rodney T. Hartnett

Given the socioeconomic, cultural, and political backgrounds of those who oversee our institutions of higher education, it would come as a real surprise if they were attentive to the needs of the general populations from which students are drawn.

33. The Proletarianization of White-Collar Labor and the Stratification of Higher Education 289

Samuel Bowles and Herbert Gintis

If recent recommendations of prestigious and official commissions on higher education are followed, it will be exceedingly difficult for blacks, women, and other working-class people to get a quality college education.

XI. CRIME AND THE LAW 297

34. What Counts as Crime? 300

Jessica Mitford

The kind of behavior that constitutes a crime varies considerably because of shifting cultural values, diverse background characteristics of alleged violators, and the political ambitions of those in positions of power.

35. Small Crime Doesn't Pay: Staying Out of Prison Takes a Lot of Class 309

The Editors of Dollars and Sense

A class analysis of crime will not explain all the variation in crimes observed, but it will explain a certain amount of the variation in the differing sentences imposed on offenders of similar crimes.

36. Class Oppression: The Functions of Juvenile Justice 312

Alexander Liazos

Many times the openly stated purposes of a system of justice contradict some of the other social functions that system comes to perform.

XII. INSTITUTIONAL SUBSERVIENCE: AN EXAMPLE 331

37. The Medical Institution: Marketing in Death and Disease 332

Janice M. Reynolds

The dominant form of social organization in America affects both which medical conditions will be selected and labeled "disease" and which methods will be used to control and eliminate these conditions.

XIII. CONCLUDING COMMENTS 347

38. A Concluding Note on the Systemic Nature of Social Problems 348

Larry T. Reynolds
