

Contents

Preface	7
----------------	---

Part 1 Theoretical perspectives

Introduction	13
1 Power, interests and causality	21
Two models of political inactivity	23
The problem of relativism	33
Causality and constraint	48
Competent rule use and the generation of bias	59
2 Housing, class interests and political action	66
The neo-Weberian approach and the concept of housing classes	67
Marxist approaches: owner-occupation as ideology	76
The economic significance of house ownership	84
Some possible implications for Weberian and Marxist approaches	93
3 The new urban politics	103
Collective consumption, contradictions and the rise of urban social movements	105
A critical evaluation of the Castells thesis	113
New politics, old dilemmas	127
4 The question of the local state	137
State policies: functions and causes	140
Theoretical perspectives on the state	150
The local state and the problem of autonomy	189

6 Contents

Part 2 Empirical applications

Introduction	201
5 The local authority	209
Social composition	210
The local council: internal relations	216
The local council: external relations	230
6 The deep south	237
The suburban middle class and the political elite	239
A green and pleasant land	244
The middle class up against it?	259
7 Participation and protest	273
The participatory response: competing agreement	278
The protest response: non-competing contradiction	290
8 Business interests and local policy	297
The town centre redevelopment	299
A community of interest and sentiment	309
Policy-making and corporate representation	319
9 The sociology of urban politics research	325
The problem of identification	328
Theory and methodology	336
The political context	346
List of references	353
Index of subjects	373
Index of names	379