

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
0.1 Some examples of second person interactions	1
0.2 The received view: folk psychology and the debate between Theory-Theory (TT) and Simulation Theory (ST)	6
0.3 Beyond the received view	10
0.4 The project of the book	13
1 Introducing the second person	16
1.1 Characterizing the second person perspective	16
1.2 Some qualifications	23
1.3 Roots of the second person perspective	26
2 Contrasting views of the second person	30
2.1 Second person interactions are not just a form of joint action, of mutual commitment	31
2.2 Second person attribution is not just a brain phenomenon	32
2.3 Second person attribution is not an automatic, subpersonal process	32
2.4 The second person perspective does not involve a new inferential way of intentional attribution that exploits interactive evidence	33

2.5	Second person attribution is not linked to grammatical facts about the personal pronouns	34
2.6	Second person attribution is not a form of embodied simulation	34
2.7	Second person attribution is not identification	35
2.8	The other in interaction is not a source of affordances	36
2.9	Second person interaction is not just an emergent self-sustaining pattern of social interaction	37
2.10	Second person interaction is not “participatory sense making”	39
2.11	The second person perspective does not ground morality	40
2.12	The second person perspective is not a step in a transcendental argument aiming to show that our concepts are grounded in shared social practices	40
2.13	Second person attributions are not always transparent	41
2.14	Second person attributions do not reduce to face to face situations	41
2.15	Conclusion	42
3	Second person attributions	43
3.1	Conceptual abilities involved in mental attributions	45
3.2	The diversity of mental concepts (or why “belief” should not be taken as the paradigm of the mental)	47
3.3	The role of language in mental attribution	53
3.4	Levels of complexity of mental attribution	56
3.5	Conclusion	59
4	Second person phenomena	60
4.1	Interactive phenomena in development	62
4.1.1	Facial affect mirroring	63
4.1.2	Forms of vitality	63
4.1.3	Teasing and mocking	64
4.1.4	Gaze following and joint attention	65
4.1.5	Communicative intentions	66
4.1.6	False belief in the second year?	67
4.2	Interaction: synchrony and coordination	68
4.2.1	Behavioral synchrony	68
4.2.2	Neural synchrony	69
4.2.3	Interaction detection	70
4.2.4	Joint action	71

4.2.5	Interpersonal coordination and affiliation	73
4.3	Evolutionary considerations	74
4.3.1	Sclera	74
4.3.2	Changes in the face mask	75
4.4	Impairments of second person interaction	76
4.5	Wrapping up	77
5	Emotional engagement and emotion attribution	79
5.1	Emotional dynamics in second person interactions	80
5.2	Emotions involve their bodily expressions	84
5.3	The acquisition of concepts of emotion in second person interactions	90
6	Expression and the second person perspective	94
6.1	Expression from the second person perspective	95
6.2	Other notions of expression	97
6.3	The limits of neo-expressivism	103
6.4	Conclusion	107
7	The interplay of perspectives	108
7.1	The self/other distinction	111
7.2	The third-person perspective	113
7.3	The interplay of perspectives in real-life interactions	117
8	Dissolving the problem of other minds	120
8.1	The many problems of other minds	120
8.2	What the second person perspective teaches about knowing other minds	124
8.3	Consequences of acknowledging the second person perspective	126
8.4	Conclusion	127
9	The second person in art	129
9.1	Expression and the second person perspective in the experience of art	130
9.2	Emotional engagement with performative art	133
9.3	Art-like features in early interactions	136

9.3.1	Art-like features in early infant-caregiver interactions	137
9.3.2	Adult performances towards infants	138
9.3.3	Different kinds of playing situations	139
10	Second person and morality	141
10.1	Reactive attitudes	142
10.2	Darvall's second person standpoint	143
10.3	Second person interaction and the emergence of moral norms	146
10.4	Tomasello's evolutionary account	150
	Epilogue	155
	References	157
	Index	180