

Contents

Preface	xi
1 The Biological Background	1
The fact of evolution	1
The path of evolution	4
The theory of evolution: natural selection	16
The theory of evolution: modern genetics	18
Good science?	20
Conclusion	27
2 Evolutionary Epistemology	29
Evolution as analogy	31
Herbert Spencer and the law of progress	37
Stephen Toulmin's Darwinian model	45
The analogy considered: the fact of evolution	46
The analogy considered: the path of evolution	49
The analogy considered: the cause of evolution	53
Donald Campbell's Darwinian variations	58
Karl Popper and the revision of Darwinism	61
Conclusion	65
3 Evolutionary Ethics	67
Moral issues	68
Evolution and ethics	71
Herbert Spencer and the moral value of progress	73
Spencerian problems	75
William Graham Sumner and Social Darwinism	78
Thomas Henry Huxley and his stand against nature	82
Hume's law and the naturalistic fallacy	86

Is the natural innately good?	90
Edward O. Wilson and the foundations of morality	93
The evolution of the moral sense	99
Conclusion	101
4 Human Evolution	103
The fact of human evolution	104
The path of human evolution	109
The cause of human evolution	115
The problem of culture	123
The biology of language	126
Ape language	134
Is culture independent of biology?	140
Epigenetic rules	143
Conclusion	147
5 Darwinian Epistemology	148
The nature of science	149
Scientific reasoning	155
The case for a biological backing	160
The case for (continued)	164
The case against	168
The rivals to science	174
Philosophical precursor: Kant?	178
Philosophical precursor: Hume?	182
Common-sense realism	184
Metaphysical scepticism	192
Konrad Lorenz and the biological a priori	196
The ultimate foundations	199
Conclusion	206
6 Darwinian Ethics	207
Substantive ethics	208
Meta-ethics	213
The evolution of morality	217
The empirical evidence: social animals	223
The empirical evidence: chimpanzees	227
The empirical evidence: humans	230
Substantive ethics reconsidered: utilitarianism	235
My family and other animals	238
To give and not to count the cost	242
Substantive ethics reconsidered: Kantianism	244
Moral disagreements	247
Darwinian meta-ethics	250
Objectifying morality	252
Stepping around Hume's law	256
Freedom of choice	258
Possible precursor: Kant?	262

Contents

	ix
Possible precursor: Hume?	266
Looking forward	269
Conclusion	273
References	280
Index	297