

Contents

Introduction	11
Sonic Investments (11) + The Return of the Voice (16) + Music: A Noun? (22) + A Sonic punctum (27) + Popular Culture, the Popular, and Pop (31) + Literature as a Social System (35) + From Proto-Pop to Pop Proper: An Outline (42)
Part I: Theories of Intermediality
1. Literature and Popular Music: Assets and Drawbacks of Intermedial Scholarship	53
1.1. Studying Musico-Literary Intermediality	54
1.2. Inter- and/or Transmediality	56
1.3. Werner Wolf and the Tradition of Intermedial Scholarship	62
1.4. Corrective Readings I: Compositions, Notations, Readability	72
1.5. Corrective Readings II: Transmediality & Paraliterature	77
1.6. Corrective Readings III: Metaphoricity	84
1.7. Corrective Readings IV: Media Channels, Generic Limits	90
2. Medial Constellations & Popular Irritations: A Systems Theoretical Reading of Intermediality	95
2.1. Luhmann's Media	96
2.2. Ornamental Guidance: Literature as Art	102
2.3. Art, Advertisement & Entertainment	107
2.4. Popular Literature	113
2.5. Pop Literature: Intermedial & Transmedial	120
2.6. Medial Constellations	132

Part II: Pre-Pop Excursions

3.	Opera Diplomacy: The Autonomy of Art and the Enigma of the Voice in Ann Patchett's Bel Canto	135
3.1.	Operatic Principles: Popularizing the Classic Paradigm	136
3.2.	Intermediality in Bel Canto	145
3.3.	Language and/versus Music	162
3.4.	Aesthetics: Utopia, Autonomy, and Reconciliation	175
4.	De-Acoustmatization and Sonic Fidelity: Reading Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man as Jazz Picaresque	191
4.1.	Hierarchy of Black Arts	192
4.2.	Medial Constellations and Metaphors of Belonging	197
4.3.	Generic Affinities: Jazz Picaresque or Symphonic Bildungsroman?	218
4.4.	Towards a Particular Universalism	242

Part III: Pop from Elvis to Altamont

5.	Pop Pathologies and Fake Authenticity: Intermedial Strategies in Short Fiction by Joyce Carol Oates, Julie Hecht and T.C. Boyle	247
5.1.	Realist Allegories of Pop Danger: J. C. Oates's "Where Are You Going, Where Have You Been"	248
5.2.	Observing Fan Pathology: J. Hecht's "I Want You I Need You I Love You"	267
5.3.	The Inauthenticity of Performance: T.C. Boyle's Understanding of Pop in "All Shook Up"	285
6.	Primal Screams and Product Placements: Intermedial Strategies in Don DeLillo's Great Jones Street	301
6.1.	Product Placements: Selling Images	303
6.2.	Sonic Architecture	320
6.3.	Quasi-Religious Epiphanies, Secret Recordings, Lyrical Reflections	328
6.4.	Metaphorical Deaths: Great Jones Street as Pop Literature	336

Part IV: Pop from MTV to MP3

7. From Intermedial Reflexivity to Transmedial Affect? Jonathan Lethem as Literary Seismograph of Pop Communication	343
7.1. Tune In	344
7.2. Headlocked in Brooklyn: The Fortress of Solitude	346
7.3. Reckless Covers: "The National Anthem"	356
7.4. From Cover Songs to Copyrights: You Don't Love Me Yet	374
8. The Analog Loyalties of iPod Literature: Music, Media, Memory in Arthur Phillips' The Song Is You	385
8.1. Proustian Pop	386
8.2. Music Through the Ages	391
8.3. Bizarre Pop Triangles	402
8.4. Data Erasure and Total Recall	412
8.5. Fading Out	416
9. Literature and the Shifting Economies of Attention: Pop Authorship in Bret Easton Ellis	419
9.1. Remediation, Authorship, Pop Literature	420
9.2. Labeling Less Than Zero : Brat Pack & MTV	429
9.3. American Psycho : Provocation, Affirmation, Post-Symbolic Writing	443
9.4. Lunar Park & Beyond: From Autofiction to Post-Empire Tweets	463
9.5. Coda	478
Conclusion: Ubiquitous Pop and Literary Futures From Aesthetics to Aestheticization (480) + Media Infrastructure & Resilient Literature (485)	479
Bibliography: Sonic Fictions of America Primary Texts (489) + Secondary Literature (Print) (490) + Secondary Literature (Internet Resources) (526)	489