

CONTENTS

1	Spaces of Memory, Spaces of Belonging: Home in Postcolonial Italy	1
1.1	Home and Home Spaces	1
1.2	Home Spaces in Italian Society	6
1.3	Home Spaces in Italian Postcolonial Literature	11
1.4	Outline of the Book	15
	References	20
2	Termini Train Station: A Place to Arrive, a Place to Leave and to Live	27
2.1	Introduction	27
2.2	Termini Train Station and its Uses	30
2.3	Termini Railway Station: A Motionless Journey Through Space and Time	38
2.4	Conclusion	50
	References	55
3	The Phone Centre, a Place to Call Home	63
3.1	Introduction	63
3.2	Phone Centres and Terrorism	66
3.3	The Phone Centre and the “Almost Home” Role	78
3.4	Conclusion	86
	References	91

4	Spaces of Residence and Transnational Microcosms in Italy	97
4.1	Introduction	97
4.2	Housing, Squatting and Mobile Homes	100
4.3	The Palazzo: A Failed Home Space	106
4.4	The Palazzina: A Transnational Microcosm	111
4.5	Conclusion	123
	References	129
5	Rooms as Home Spaces: The Bathroom and the Bedroom as Memory Containers	137
5.1	Introduction	137
5.2	The Kitchen, an Absent Place	139
5.3	"I Hate Confined Spaces. Except This Bathroom" Ahmed, Amedeo and the Bathroom	141
5.4	Smelling the Absence: "Usually She Would Shut Herself up in the Bedroom". The Bedroom in Rhoda	152
5.5	Conclusion	159
	References	164
6	Conclusion—At Home, Everywhere	169
	References	178
	Index	181