

Contents

Foreword VII

Susanne Reichl

Acknowledgements XI

Notes on Contributors XII

Introduction: Postcolonial Youth In Contemporary British Fiction 1

*Laura María Lojo-Rodríguez, Jorge Sacido-Romero and Noemí
Pereira-Ares*

PART 1

Youth, Home and Belonging

1 Evil Children of the Diaspora

Andrea Levy's "Deborah" 25

Laura María Lojo-Rodríguez

2 "the world was a strange place to be caught living in"

Aspects of Liminality in Jamaica Kincaid's Annie John 41

Gérald Préher

3 The Postcolonial Adolescent in Roshi Fernando's Homesick 59

Carmen Lara-Rallo

PART 2

Youth, Nation and Narration

4 Growing Up Multiply

British Women Write the Ampersand Experience 81

Isabel Carrera-Suárez and Carla Rodríguez-González

5 Multiethnicity, Liminality and Fantasy in Jamila Gavin's Stories for Young
Readers 100

Laura Torres-Zúñiga

- 6 “A Right Little Good Little Indian Girl, Are You”
*The Quest for Identity and Sociocultural Change in Ravinder Randhawa's
 Dynamite* 124
Isabel M. Andrés-Cuevas

PART 3

Youth, Dislocation and Transformation

- 7 Multicultural Adolescence and Its Identitary Vicissitudes in Contemporary British Short Stories 149
Jorge Sacido-Romero
- 8 From “Partial Presence” to “Disruptive Impurity”
The Diasporic Adolescent in Leila Aboulela's Short Fiction 173
Karima Thomas
- 9 “I’m the Only One”
Transgressing Notions of Postcolonial Adolescence in the Contemporary Black British Short Story 193
Bettina Jansen

PART 4

Youth, Religion and Global Politics

- 10 The Virgin’s Consent
*British Muslim Identity, Cultural Heritage and Gender in Young Adult
 Fiction* 217
Claire Chambers and Indrani Karmakar
- 11 Reading for Resilience
Postcolonial Aesthetics in the Post-9/11 British Novel for the Young 238
Blanka Grzegorzcyk
- 12 “Growing Up with Anxiety(ies)”
From Islamophobia to Brexit in A Change Is Gonna Come 253
Noemí Pereira-Ares