

Contents

Preface — ix

Abbreviations — xi

List of Figures — xv

List of Tables — xvii

Introduction — 1

Part 1: Preliminaries

- I The Old Frisian Runic Corpus Edition — 7
 - I.1 Runology and Runological Practice: From Autopsy to Interpretation — 7
 - I.1.1 What is Runology? — 8
 - I.1.2 Runological Methodology and Uncertainty Factors — 10
 - I.1.3 Transliteration Principles Applied in this Edition — 13
 - I.2 Compiling a Corpus of Frisian Runic Inscriptions: Research Overview — 15
 - I.2.1 Beginnings of a Frisian Runic Corpus — 15
 - I.2.2 The Previous Main Editions of the Frisian Runic Corpus — 17
 - I.2.3 Individual Articles, Short Checklists and Analyses of the Frisian Runic Corpus — 17
 - I.2.4 Problems and Methodological Approach to this Edition — 18
 - Methodological Problems — 19
 - Find Situation-Dependent/Material-Inherent Problems — 19
 - I.2.5 Step-by-Step Approach and Structure of this Edition — 20
- II Germanic Language Models and Periodization — 23
 - II.1 Some Terminological Definitions: Dialect, Language and Culture — 23
 - II.2 From the North-West Germanic Continuum to the West-Germanic Individual Languages — 25
 - II.3 Old-English and Old-Frisian against the Backdrop of the Germanic Languages — 30
 - II.3.1 The ‘Anglo-Frisian’ Model — 31
 - II.3.2 The ‘Ingvaemonic’ or North Sea Germanic Model — 34
 - II.3.3 The Convergence Model — 36

- II.4 North-Sea Germanic Sound Changes and Runic Innovations — 40
- II.4.1 From the Common Germanic fupark to the Old-English fuporc — 40
- II.4.2 Phase I in Detail: North Sea Germanic Innovations — 44
- II.5 Linguistic Chronology and Periodization of Old English and Old Frisian — 46
- II.5.1 Old English Periodization — 47
- II.5.2 Old Frisian Periodization — 48

- III Historical and Archaeological Framework — 52
- III.1 Archaeological Chronology and Periodization of the Merovingian Period — 52
- III.2 Historical Sources on the Early Frisians — 58
- III.2.1 Etymology of the Ethnonym — 59
- III.2.2 History I: Frisians in the Early Classical Sources (1st–4th century) — 60
- III.2.3 History II: Frisians in Late Classical Sources (5th–7th centuries) — 62
- III.3 Archaeological Survey: Frisia from the 4th to the 10th Century — 64
- III.3.1 Area of Interest and Preservation Conditions — 64
- III.3.2 Iron Age Origins — 66
- III.3.3 Roman Period — 67
- III.3.4 Migration Period and Beyond: Continuity or Discontinuity? — 67
- III.3.5 From AD 700 to AD 1100: Frisia and North Sea Connections — 70

Part 2: Linguistic Analyses

- IV Phonological Discussion of the OFRC — 75
- IV.1 Representation of Vowels in Stressed Syllables — 76
- IV.1.1 Evidence for CGmc and North-Sea Gmc Compensatory Lengthening (No. 73, 53), Rounding of WGmc *a (No. 55), Nasalization of WGmc *ā (No. 53) — 76
- IV.1.2 Evidence for the split of WGmc *ā (No. 52, 54), Gmc *ai (No. 58) and Gmc *au (No. 78) — 77
- IV.1.3 Comparison of Stressed Vowels in the OFRC to Evidence from Early Runic and the OERC — 80
- IV.2 Representation of Vowels in Unstressed Syllables in the OFRC — 82
- IV.2.1 Rune no. 2 ᚲ in Final, Unstressed Position — 82
- IV.2.2 Rune no. 2 ᚲ in Medial, Unstressed Position — 89
- IV.2.3 Rune no. 2 ᚲ as Parasite Vowel — 90
- IV.2.4 Rune no. 25 ƿ in Final, Unstressed Position — 90
- IV.2.5 Rune no. 26 ƿ in Final, Unstressed Position — 92
- IV.2.6 Rune no. 24 ʀ in Medial, Unstressed Position — 93

IV.2.7 Comparison of Unaccented Vowels in the OFRC to Evidence from Early Runic and the OERC — 94

V Graphemic Discussion of the OFRC — 97

V.1 Theoretical Preliminaries and Reconstruction of the Frisian fuþorc Rows — 97

V.2 Graphemic Analysis of Selected Forms — 105

V.2.1 Types and Sub-Types of Runes no. 4 ƿ ōs and no. 25 ƿ āc — 105

V.2.2 Types and Sub-Types of No. 6 ƿ ċēn and No. 9 ƿ hægel. — 108

V.2.3 Other Variants in the OERC and OFRC: Rune no. 12, Gmc jāra*, OE gē(a)r — 111

V.2.4 Manuscript Evidence for the ‘Ominous’ Runes on WESTEREMDEN B: 𐌺, 𐌻 — 115

VI Pragmatic Discussion of the OFRC — 117

VI.1 Previous Approaches to the Pragmatic Interpretation of Runic Inscriptions — 117

VI.2 Theoretical Preliminaries: Structural Consequences and Communicative Context of Written Communication — 121

VI.3 Inscription-Types, Formulae and Communicative Intentions — 124

Part 3: The OFRC Edition

Combs — 133

OFRC1: KANTENS Comb Case — 133

OFRC2: AMAY Bone Comb — 141

OFRC3: FERWERD Comb Case — 149

OFRC4: HOOGEBEINTUM Comb — 157

OFRC5: TOORNWERD Comb — 163

OFRC6: OOSTUM Bone Comb — 171

Coins and Bracteates — 183

OFRC7: Wurt HITZUM-A Bracteate — 183

OFRC8: SKANOMODU Solidus Pendant — 195

OFRC9: SCHWEINDORF Solidus Pendant — 212

OFRC10: HARLINGEN Solidus — 230

OFRC11: FOLKESTONE Tremissis / GLASGOW Tremissis — 241

OFRC12: MIDLUM Scaet — 252

Metal Objects — 263

OFRC13: BERGAKKER Scabbard Mount — 263

OFRC14: WIJNALDUM Gold Pendant — 289

OFRC15: BORGHAREN Belt Buckle — 296

Yew Objects — 305

OFRC16: ARUM Yew Sword — 305

OFRC17: BRITSUM Yew-Stick — 319

OFRC18: WESTEREMDEN A — 334

OFRC19: WESTEREMDEN B — 346

Bone Objects — 361

OFRC20: BERNSTERBUREN Tau Staff — 361

OFRC21: RASQUERT Sword-Handle — 370

OFRC22: HAMWIC Bone — 378

OFRC23: HANTUM Bone Plate — 387

OFRC24: WIJNALDUM A Bone — 395

Conclusion: A Frisian or North-Sea Corpus? — 403

Summary — 403

Results — 405

Bibliography — 427

Dictionaries and Grammars — 427

Corpora, Editions and Databases — 429

References — 429

Register — 459