

Contents

---

List of figures	vii
List of tables	ix
List of boxes	x
List of contributors	xi
Preface	xii
John C. Bergstrom and John C. Whitehead
1 Reflections on the historical development of natural resource and environmental economics	1
John C. Bergstrom
PART I PARADIGMS
2 Positive economics, economic efficiency, environmental economics and policy	22
David McEvoy
3 An applied welfare economics approach to teaching natural resource and environmental economics	44
John C. Bergstrom
4 An ecosystem services approach to natural resource and environmental economics	62
Robert J. Johnston
5 Incentives, institutions, and inequality: a pluralist approach to teaching environmental and natural resource economics	102
Kathleen Lawlor
6 Principles for teaching the principles of environmental and resource economics	130
Tim Haab

PART II PEDAGOGY

7	Teaching environmental justice with data-driven projects Amy Henderson	149
8	A small collection of pen-and-paper classroom experiments for teaching environmental economics classes Stephan Kroll	174
9	Teaching environmental and natural resource economics with research projects John C. Whitehead	202
10	Teaching natural resource economics using policy briefs: ethics in pedagogy and practice Leah Greden Mathews	228
11	Using technology to teach sustainability with applications to conservation biology and ecosystem service management Shana M. McDermott	250
12	Teaching natural resource and environmental valuation techniques Peter W. Schuhmann	268
13	Triangulated teaching: approaching environmental economics from multiple angles David A. Anderson	284
14	Teaching the economics of environmental policy with applications to energy, air pollution and climate change Jim Casey	297
	Index	307