

C O N T E N T S

Preface	vii
----------------------	-----

Part I: Dilthey, Husserl, and The Foundations of Science

1. The Problem of Generalization in Dilthey and Husserl Ernst Wolfgang Orth (Trier)	1
2. Dilthey, Husserl, and Prima Philosophia Thomas M. Seebohm (Mainz)	23
3. "Nature" in the Human-Scientific Perspective: An Husserlian Response to Dilthey John E. Jalbert (Sacred Heart University)	31
4. "Nature" in the Human-Scientific Perspective: A Diltheyan Response to Husserl M. Katherine Tillman (Notre Dame)	49
5. The Status of Intentionality in Dilthey's "Studies toward the Foundation of the Human Sciences" John Scanlon (Duquesne University)	55

Part II: Relativity and Structure in Dilthey's Philosophy

6. Objectivity and Relativity in Dilthey's Theory of Understanding Michael Ermarth (Dartmouth College)	73
7. On Mandelbaum's Critique of Dilthey's Relativism Holly L. Wilson (The Pennsylvania State University)	95
8. Dilthey's Concept of "Structure" within the Context of Nineteenth-Century Science and Philosophy Frithjof Rodi (Bochum)	107

Part III: Dilthey and the Phenomenological Understanding of Time

9. The Future Perfect: Temporality and Priority in Husserl,
Heidegger, and Dilthey
David Carr (University of Ottawa)125

10. The Overcoming of Linear Time in Kant, Dilthey, and Heidegger
Rudolf A. Makkreel (Emory University)141

List of Contributors159

Index of Names161

Index of Topics163