

Contents

	Acknowledgements	viii
	Introduction: Saying No to Death?: William Faulkner's Aesthetic of Mortality	1
1	A Fine Dead Sound: Quentin Compson's Suicide in The Sound and the Fury	21
2	Living Was Terrible: Confrontations with Mortality in As I Lay Dying	51
3	Burying the Fallen Monument: The Death of the Old South in "A Rose for Emily"	81
4	A Bloody Mischancing of Human Affairs: Murder and Violence in Light in August and Absalom, Absalom!	108
5	Ah'm Goan Home: Narration, Homegoing, and Whiteness in Go Down, Moses	144
	Conclusion: Breaking the Pencil: Death and Voice in Faulkner's Fiction	174
	Index	180