

CONTENTS

FACSIMILE TITLE PAGE	v
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE	vi
EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION	1
1. The New England Controversy on Original Sin	4
2. Edwards' Life and Literary Sources	16
3. Exposition of Arguments	26
The Fact and Nature of Sin	27
The Cause and Transmission of Sin	41
God the Author of Sin	60
Miscellaneous Arguments Answered	64
4. Edwards' Sources	67
John Taylor	68
George Turnbull	70
Francis Hutcheson	74
John Locke	77
Henry Winder	81
Other Authors	82
5. Notes on the Manuscripts and Text	85
6. Reception and Evaluations of the Original Sin	97
AUTHOR'S PREFACE	102

TEXT OF ORIGINAL SIN

Part One. Wherein are considered some evidences of original sin from facts and events, as found by observation and experience, together with representations and testimonies of holy Scripture, and the confession and assertions of opposers	105
CHAPTER I. The evidence of original sin from what appears in fact of the sinfulness of mankind	107
SECTION 1. All mankind do constantly in all ages, without fail in any one instance, run into that moral evil, which is in effect their own utter and eternal perdition, in a total privation of God's favor and suffering of his vengeance and wrath	107
SECTION 2. It follows from the proposition proved in the foregoing section, that all mankind are under the influence of a prevailing effectual tendency in their nature, to that sin and wickedness, which implies their utter and eternal ruin	120

SECTION 3. That propensity which has been proved to be in the nature of all mankind, must be a very evil, depraved and pernicious propensity; making it manifest that the soul of man, as it is by nature, is in a corrupt, fallen and ruined state: which is the other part of the consequence, drawn from the proposition laid down in the first section	128
SECTION 4. The depravity of nature appears by a propensity in all to sin immediately, as soon as they are capable of it, and to sin continually and progressively; and also by the remains of sin in the best of men	134
SECTION 5. The depravity of nature appears, in that the general consequence of the state and tendency of man's nature is a much greater degree of sin, than righteousness; not only with respect to value and demerit, but matter and quantity	139
SECTION 6. The corruption of man's nature appears by its tendency, in its present state, to an extreme degree of folly and stupidity in matters of religion	147
SECTION 7. That man's nature is corrupt, appears, in that vastly the greater part of mankind, in all ages, have been wicked men	158
SECTION 8. The native depravity of mankind appears, in that there has been so little good effect of so manifold and great means, used to promote virtue in the world	169
SECTION 9. Several evasions of the arguments for the depravity of nature, from trial and events, considered	189
Evasion 1. Adam's nature, and the nature of the angels that fell, was not sinful, yet they sinned: and all mankind may, without a sinful nature, sin as well as they	189
Evasion 2. Man's own free will is a cause sufficient to account for the general wickedness of the world	194
Evasion 3. The corruption of the world, may be owing, not to a depraved nature, but to bad example	195
Evasion 4. The general prevalence of wickedness may, without supposing a corrupt nature, be accounted for by our senses being first in exercise, and our animal passions getting the start of reason	201

Evasion 5. Men in this world are in a state of trial; it is therefore fit, that their virtue should be tried by opposition, both from without and from within	204
CHAPTER II. Universal mortality proves original sin: particularly the death of infants, with its various circumstances	206
Part Two. Containing observations on particular parts of the holy Scripture, which prove the doctrine of original sin	221
CHAPTER I. Observations relating to things contained in the three first chapters of Genesis, with reference to the doctrine of original sin	223
SECTION 1. Concerning original righteousness: and whether our first parents were created with righteousness or moral rectitude of heart?	223
SECTION 2. Concerning the kind of death, threatened to our first parents, if they should eat of the forbidden fruit	237
SECTION 3. Wherein it is inquired, whether there be anything in the history of the three first chapters of Genesis, which should lead us to suppose, that God, in his constitution with Adam, dealt with mankind in general, as included in their first father, and that the threatening of death, in case he should eat the forbidden fruit, had respect not only to him, but his posterity?	245
CHAPTER II. Observations on other parts of the holy Scriptures, chiefly in the Old Testament, that prove the doctrine of original sin	262
CHAPTER III. Observations on various other places of Scripture, principally of the New Testament, proving the doctrine of original sin	274
SECTION 1. Observations on John 3:6 in connection with some other passages in the New Testament	274
SECTION 2. Observations on Romans 3:9-24	283
SECTION 3. Observations on Romans 5:6-10, and Ephesians 2:3 with the context, and Romans 7	292
CHAPTER IV. Containing observations on Romans 5:12 to the end	306
SECTION 1. Remarks on Dr. Taylor's way of explaining this text	306

SECTION 2. Some observations, on the connection, scope and sense of this remarkable paragraph in Romans V; with some reflections on the evidence, which we here have, of the doctrine of original sin	335
Part Three. Observing the evidence given us, relative to the doctrine of original sin, in what the Scriptures reveal concerning the redemption by Christ	351
CHAPTER I. The evidence of original sin from the nature of redemption, in the procurement of it	353
CHAPTER II. The evidence of the doctrine of original sin from what the Scripture teaches of the application of redemption	361
Part Four. Containing answers to objections	373
CHAPTER I. Concerning that objection, that to suppose men's being born in sin, without their choice, or any previous act of their own, is to suppose what is inconsistent with the nature of sin	375
CHAPTER II. Concerning that objection against the doctrine of native corruption, that to suppose men receive their first existence in sin, is to make him who is the Author of their being, the Author of their depravity	380
CHAPTER III. That great objection against the imputation of Adam's sin to his posterity considered, that such imputation is unjust and unreasonable, inasmuch as Adam and his posterity are not one and the same. With a brief reflection subjoined, on what some have supposed, of God's imputing the guilt of Adam's sin to his posterity, but in an infinitely less degree, than to Adam himself	389
CHAPTER IV. Wherein several other objections are considered, viz. That at the restoration of the world after the flood, God pronounced equivalent, or greater blessings on Noah and his sons, than he did on Adam at his creation	413
That the doctrine of original sin disparages the divine goodness in giving us our being, and leaves us no reason to thank God for it, as a gift of his beneficence	416
That at the day of judgment, the Judge will deal with every man singly and separately, rendering to every man according to his own works, and his improvement of personal talents	419
That the word "impute" is never used in Scripture, but with respect to men's own personal acts	421

That little children are proposed as patterns of humility, meekness, and innocence	422
That the doctrine of original sin pours contempt upon the human nature	423
That it tends to beget in us an ill opinion of our fellow-creatures, and to promote ill will and mutual hatred	424
That it hinders our comfort, and promotes gloominess of mind	424
That it tends to encourage men in sin, and leads to all manner of iniquity	425
That if this doctrine be true, it must be unlawful to beget children	425
That it's strange, this doctrine should be no oftener, and not more plainly, spoken of in Scripture; it being, if true, a very important doctrine	426
That Christ says not one word of this doctrine throughout the four Gospels	428
Conclusion. Containing some brief observations on certain artful methods, used by writers who are adversaries of this doctrine, in order to prejudice their readers against it	434
INDEX	439